NAVAL PURSUIT OF THE SHUNTIAN PIRATES

PARLIAMENTARY ACTIVITY

No Time For Monetary Discussion

London, June 18.
In reply to a question in the House of Commons to-day, the Prime Minister said he regretted that in view of the pressure of Parliamentary business he could hold out no hope of special time being given for a discussion of monetary policy.—British Wireless.

ENGLAND'S TEST TROUBLES

WHOLE TEAM TO BE RECAST

LEADING PLAYERS UNFIT

London, June 18.
England's Test selectors are experiencing acute difficulties in nominating a satisfactory team for the Second Test which opens at Lord's on Friday.

It is confirmed that Larwood, the famous fast bowler of Nottinghamshire, has declined to play, and other players on which the Committee desired to call are not available for other reasons.

The English team for the Second Test was expected to be announced to-night, but the selectors have not yet completed their task.

Sir Stanley Jackson, the chairman, stated that three men who the Committee hoped to play, informed the Committee to-night that they are not fit.

BALANCE UPSET.

Therefore, the Committee will have to reconsider the composition of the team to-morrow as the balance of the side has been entirely upset by these mishaps.

Sir Stanley hinted that efforts had been made to persuade Larwood to change his mind when he said that Larwood still adhered to his decision not to play in any Test Match.—Reuter.

CHAN LIM-PAK DISAPPEARANCE

$1,000 OFFERED FOR ARREST

The Telegraph is informed by Mr. Johnson Wong, who is complainant in a number of forgery and embezzlement charges against Mr. Chan Lim-pak, that he has offered a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the latter's arrest. Mr. Wong says that he handed that amount to his solicitor yesterday morning with instructions that it be turned over to the police in connection with the issuance of a public notification to that effect.

Meanwhile there has been an important change in the administration of the Nanyang Brothers, Mr. Kan Yuk-kai from Shanghai, being now appointed to succeed Mr. Chan Lim-pak in the position of local Managing Director.

VICEROY IN ENGLAND

London, June 18.
The Viceroy of India, Lord Willingdon, accompanied by Lady Willingdon, arrived at Croydon to-day by Imperial Airways liner from India, to spend a brief holiday in England. He was met on arrival by Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary for India, and others.—British Wireless.

BADLY WOUNDED THIRD OFFICER

IMPORTANT CLUE IN NAVAL HANDS

NUMBERS OF PIRATE JUNKS TAKEN

Swift naval action following the daring piracy of the newest ship of the Butterfield and Swire fleet, the s.s. Shuntien, has failed, up to the time of going to press, to produce any results, although a valuable clue has been provided by the Shuntien, whose officers were able to identify the numbers of the junks that co-operated with the pirate gang.

Mr. J. P. Ross, the third officer, who was wounded in the encounter, which occurred yesterday in no immediate danger. It is not yet known under what circumstances he was shot.

Naval efforts are concentrated upon securing the release of the six foreigners kidnapped by the pirates, among them being two British naval officers attached to the submarines.

H.M.S. WITCH PICKS UP SHIP

H.M.S. Witch, which picked up the Shuntien on her way to Chefoo during the night, and boarded the ship, sent a wireless message to Shanghai in the early hours of this morning (says Reuter) announcing that Mr. J. P. Ross, the third officer of the Shuntien, was severely wounded by the pirates.

His condition, however, appears to be satisfactory. He is in no immediate danger.

Mr. Ross is an Englishman. His parents live in Shanghai.

USUAL MANNER.

The Shuntien officers state that the pirates worked in their usual manner, boarding the vessel as passengers at Tientsin and attacking all the important points at a given signal.

Within a few minutes of the attack, they had secured complete control of the bridge, the wireless operator's cabin and the engine-room.

Half the pirates then commenced on the process of ransacking the ship from stem to stern, concentrating chiefly upon easily removable loot such as money and valuables.

CREW TERRORISED.

The other section of the gang kept the officers covered with revolvers and terrorised the passengers and the crew.

The pirates worked fast and it was evident from their tactics that the affair was well-planned, with their rendezvous for departing from the ship well organised beforehand.

JUNKS NOTED.

Hardly had they completed the collection of the loot and arrived at the point to which they had ordered the master to direct the ship that five junks appeared alongside and the transfer of the haul was undertaken.

When the bigger articles stolen had been stowed away, the pirates picked out twenty of the Chinese passengers as victims to accompany them and ordered them into the junks.

FATE DECIDED.

Immediately afterwards, following some palaver between the leaders of the gang, the six foreigners, including Lieutenants Field and Lucas, Mr. Nicholls, Shanghai manager of Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, the Second Officer, Mr. Brand the Third En-

VALUABLE CLUE.

It is stated that those on board were able to note the registration numbers of the junks.

The Shuntien's master is Captain C. A. Christiansen, who has been in the employ of Messrs. Butterfield and Swire on the China Coast for thirty years.

This was the second trip of the Shuntien from Tientsin to Chefoo. She was built in Hongkong at Taikeo and was only put into commission a few weeks ago, her maiden voyage having been embarked upon last month.—Reuter.

AMERICAN FLEET SAILS

TAKE REGRETFUL LEAVE OF NEW YORK

New York, June 18.
With handkerchiefs fluttering from the hands of thousands of spectators on the waterfront and sailors lining the decks waving their caps, the United States Fleet put out to sea after a stay of eighteen days.

Half a million persons visited the Fleet during the stay in New York, the aeroplane carriers, Lexington and Saratoga, being the chief centre of attraction.

The ships are sailing for various points on the Atlantic coast. They will carry out tactical exercises and participate in the Fourth of July celebrations. They are returning to the Pacific in September.—Reuter.

Irish Free State Joke Again

WAR DEBT PAYMENT BY TERRITORY

London, June 18.
The payment of war debts in island territories was revived as a recommendation for official consideration in the House of Commons to-day.

The Island of Bermuda was singled out by the questioner as offering adequate compensation for non-payment of cash, but it was officially emphasised that this method is not likely to be employed.

There can be no question whatsoever of our handing over either Bermuda or any other island territories adjacent to the United States in liquidation of our war debt to America, declared Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, when the suggestion was put in the House this afternoon.

The questioner argued that these islands were no longer of any defensive value to the British Empire.

Another member light-heartedly asked if Mr. Ramsay MacDonald will try to persuade the United States to take over the Irish Free State.—Reuter.

NO REAL BREAK IN DROUGHT

Growing Anxieties In England

London, June 18.
Hot dry weather continues throughout Britain and although there is possibility of a thunderstorm to-night, the general outlook indicates a continuance of drought which is causing anxiety to water authorities and farmers.

Heath fires have occurred in some parts and several acres were burnt on Ascot Heath to-day, near the course where the most fashionable race meeting of the season opens to-morrow.—British Wireless.

U.S. AIR SENSATION

GENERAL FOULOIS ATTACKED

ACCUSED OF LYING

Washington, June 18.
Further serious charges were laid against Major-General Benjamin Foulois, Chief of the Army Air Corps, during a discussion in the House of Representatives to-day.

Speaking on the report of the Committee which asked for the removal of Major-General Foulois from his post for "gross misconduct and inefficiency," Mr. W. Rogers, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, declared that Major-General Foulois lied when he testified before the Committee that the Army pilots who recently had to fly mail planes had undergone from thirty to sixty hours of night-flying.

Mr. Rogers quoted figures which, he said, showed that the pilots, involved in the air mail crashes had a much lower average of night-flying experience. Some of them had only 8.2 hours of night-flying.—Reuter.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY CHARGES

Three S.W.B. Privates in Court

Ptes. Robert Booth, John Roberts and Roy Horley, all of the South Wales Borderers, were charged at the Central Magistrate's court this morning with highway robbery on Island Road near Repulse Bay Hotel and stealing $2 from Lo King, licensed motor driver.

They were further charged with assaulting Lo King.

Det.-Sergt. Pitches, in charge of the case, asked for early hearing, and evidence will be given this afternoon.

AAA CONTROL OF TOBACCO

MORE RESTRICTION MEASURES

Washington, June 18.
The Senate has passed the Kerr Bill for the curtailment of production of tobacco in the season 1934/35.

The Bill places a sales tax of from 25 to 33 1/3rd per cent, on all tobacco produced in excess of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's allotments.

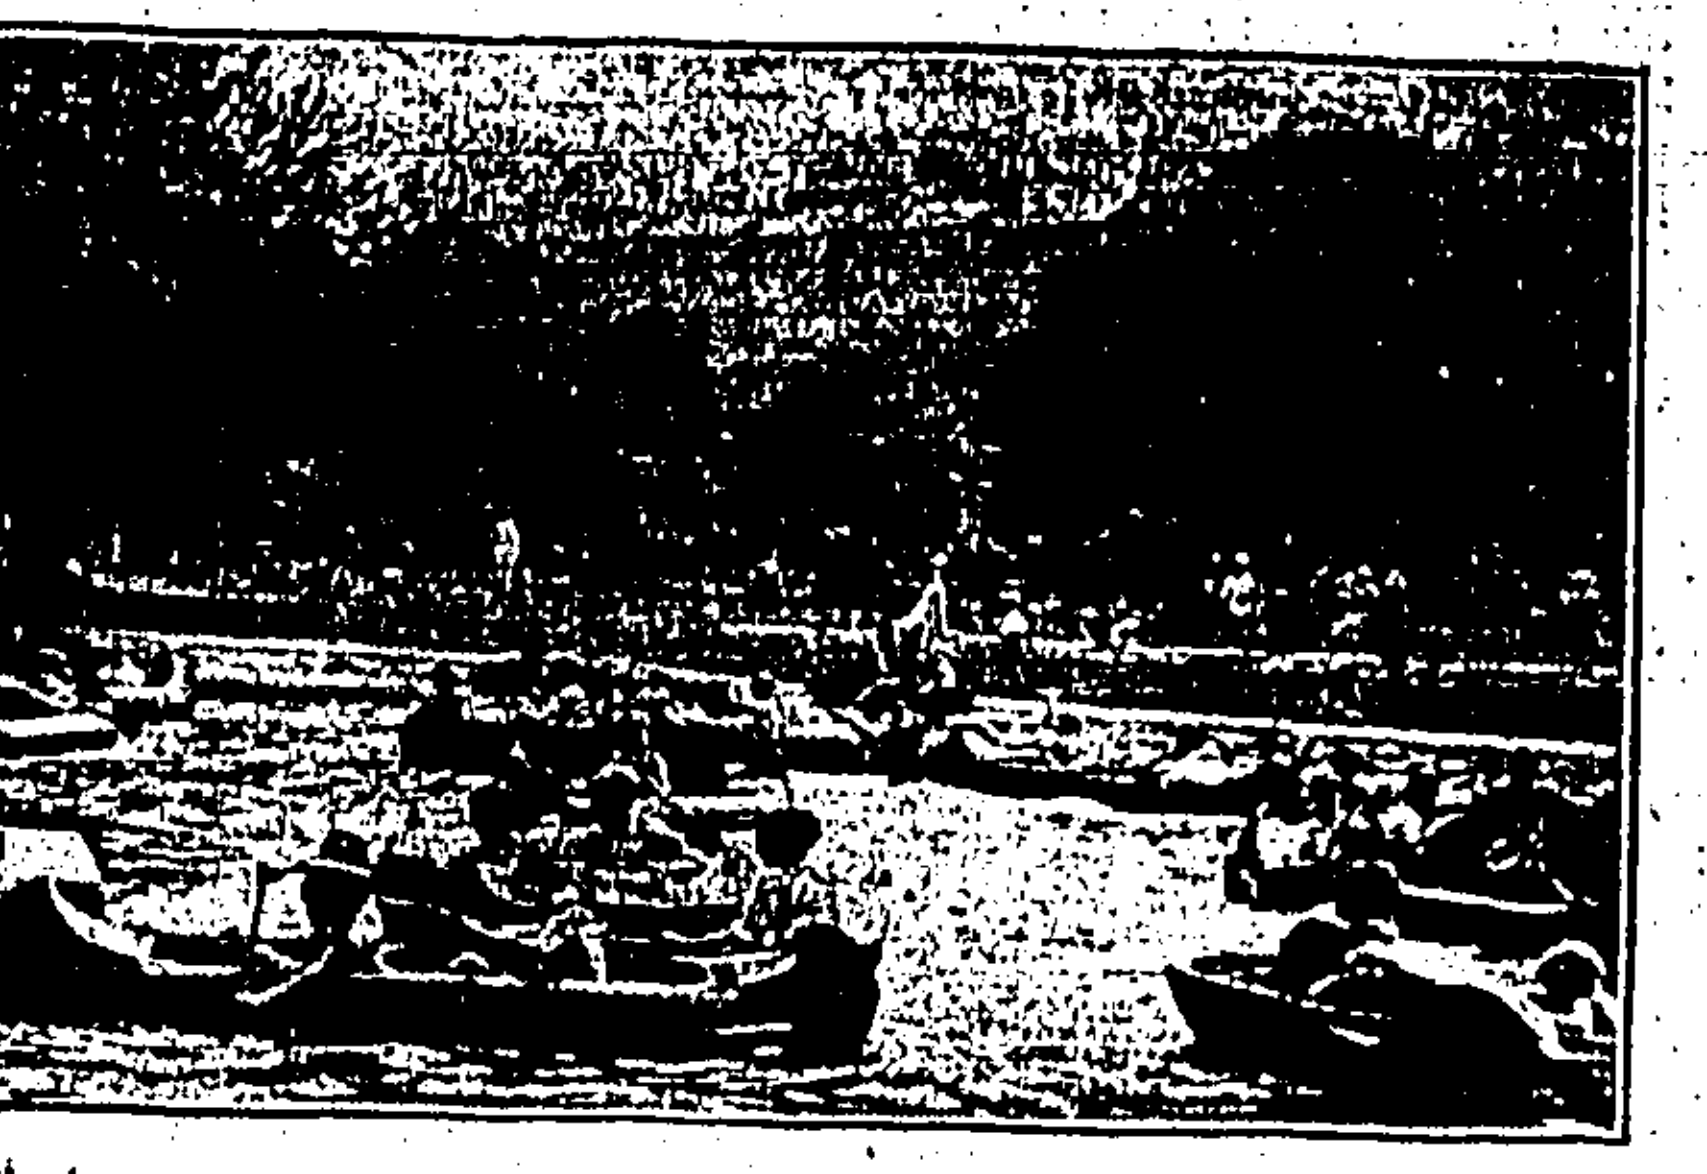

The Bill has now been sent to the House of Representatives for action on the amendments.—Reuter.

THE INGRAM OUTRAGE

NO TRACE OF ROBBER GANG DISCOVERED

VICTIM BURIED AT TUNGCHOW

Peking, June 18.
After a service at the Union Church this afternoon the remains of the late Dr. Ingram were conveyed to Tungchow for burial at the Permanent Cemetery, where are the graves of the foreigners who perished during the Boxer Rebellion.

Up to present, no clue has been secured to aid in tracing the bandits responsible for the murder of Dr. Ingram.

General Yu Hsueh-chung, Governor of Hopesi Provincial Government, has despatched additional troops to assist in the search.

According to a Government spokesman, the Chinese authorities are likely to take a census of the people in the districts surrounding Shih Ching-shan, where the crime was committed.

The Government is holding the magistrate of Yuen Ping District responsible. He may be punished if no trace of the bandits is found in the near future.—Central News.

STATE GOVERNOR CONVICTED

OFFICIAL SCANDAL IN N. DAKOTA

New York, June 13.
As a sequel to the action of a Federal Court jury, sitting at Bismarck, North Dakota, in convicting the Governor of the State, Mr. W. M. Langer, and four associates, on a charge of defrauding the United States Government, the Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. O. H. Olson, has taken the oath of office as Governor.

Sentence on Governor Langer has been deferred until June 29 when arguments for a new trial will be heard.—Reuter.

THREE PETROL TANKS EXPLODE

MANY KILLED AND INJURED

INSTALLATION DISASTER

New York, June 18.
Heavy loss of life followed a terrific explosion on the premises of the Richfield Oil Company at Jamestown, New York State, to-day.

A tremendous conflagration is now raging over a wide area.

At least a dozen men were killed outright, and between forty and fifty seriously injured in the original explosion, which involved three great petrol tanks.

The three tanks were each capable of storing twenty thousand gallons of petrol, and they went up one after the other with disastrous results.

The explosion is believed to have been due to an electric spark.

MANY UNDER BLAZING MASS.

The whole area was a blazing mass within a few minutes and in this immense outbreak rescue efforts were vain. Many victims are reported to be still under the debris.

All ambulances in the town and the fire brigades from all the surrounding districts have been summoned to help the local authorities.—Reuter.

TRAGEDIES AT FORD WORKS

Explosion Occurs In Foundry

One death followed an explosion in which twelve were injured, five seriously. The other death was due to a man being caught in a conveyor belt.—Reuter.

SERIOUS PREPARATION FOR AIR RACE

Re-Fuelling Teams For Fitzmaurice Plane

London, June 18.
Mr. Eric Watt Bonar, co-pilot with Colonel Fitzmaurice, who is to compete in the London-Melbourne Air Race in October, has started a flight to Singapore to survey the aerodromes on the route and to complete refuelling arrangements.

Colonel Fitzmaurice, Irish Atlantic flier, has designed a refuelling unit which can fill the largest tank in a few minutes.

The use of this will entail the training of expert refuellers, a team of which will be stationed at each checking station en route and will be able to serve the machine while the pilot is attending to the details of checking in.—Reuter.

Thought Something Terrible Was Wrong With My Baby

Natural Way Doctors Advise Makes Baby Hungry for Food — Restores Health Naturally

No longer need you fear that something terrible is wrong when your child is fretful, listless or won't eat. Simply do this at once:

Give your baby a little Castoria and see how quickly improvement comes.

Authorities have found that intestinal absorption may be poisoning the system even when the child's habits may seem regular. The stomach is upset. Digestion is impaired. Nerves lose their delicate balance.

Nothing corrects this distressing condition quite as naturally and safely as Castoria. Swiftly it cleanses the system, settles the stomach, improves digestion and restores nerve-poise. Then Nature does the rest as only Nature can. Appetite for food returns. Health is again normal. As a result baby gains weight fast.

Now don't worry, mother. At the first warning that all is not well give your child a little Castoria. Results will surprise you.

CHAPTER XXIX

It would be fun, Gypsy said to herself on the Tuesday following their reconciliation, to go down and surprise Tom at lunch-time. Somehow she never seemed to have time for these small honeymoon gaieties any more. She dressed in her best—the new gray suit, the postage stamp hat perched on her shining crop of curls. The spring wind blew chaff and papers in the streets. The sun sent slanting bright shafts of sunlight into the gray canyons. It was a perfect day for an adventure.

She went up in the bronze elevator, smiling secretly at her own daring. The girl at the information desk was now and did not recognize her. She didn't give her name. Was Mr. Weaver in? The girl, who had the head and shoulders of a wax mannequin, spoke softly into a telephone and informed her that Mr. Weaver was just on his way out to lunch. What name?

"I'll wait here," Gypsy sat in the deep divan which swallowed up her smallness. In the dim light her gray costume was scarcely noticeable against the taupe background. Presently she heard Tom's step and almost started to her feet. But as he emerged from the corridor she saw he was not alone. A tall, gilt-haired girl was with him. He had her arm and was speaking to her earnestly. They seemed utterly absorbed. They did not see her as they stood waiting for the down elevator.

Gypsy's heart felt as though an icy hand were squeezing it. She sat perfectly still as the elevator door clanged open and shut and Tom's laugh rang out as the car shot downward. The information clerk glanced up curiously as she rose to go.

"Why, Mr. Weaver left just now. Didn't you see him?"

"No—I—I," she stammered, "I'll be back later."

"Anything I can do?" The wax mannequin was helpful.

Gypsy's eyes wandered past her. Anything she could do? No, there was nothing anyone could do for her to-day. She had trusted him so completely, so utterly;

and yet she must believe the evidence of her eyes. How absorbed he had been! She had been right—she had been right all the time! She walked aimlessly down Broadway. Past Trinity churchyard with doves wheeling in the sunshine, past block after block of stone facades and plate glass and table d'hôte restaurants and haberdashery.

A hooded subway entrance at Park Place reminded her that she must be home before it was time for Elsa to leave. She ran down the stairs and clicked past the turnstile, paying her fare. There was the baby to be thought of. If all else failed, if her world crumbled to dust around her there was always David, small and pink and trusting and fond. She never knew, later, how she got through the dreadful day. Her throat would be dry, her heart would beat thickly and painfully when she thought of her husband's homecoming. What would she say to him? How begin?

Elsa put on her gray coat and big, soft, shapeless hat and went away. Gypsy bundled the baby up and carried him down to the perambulator garage in the basement of the building and trundled him out into the sunshiny street. The day had turned warmer. All along the pavements balls were tossed and small girls jumped rope. In a dark, narrow, stone-paved schoolyard some boys played marbles. Bedding tumbled out of second storey windows in a block of run-down tenements and Gypsy set her teeth, pushing David's carriage along this particular sidewalk. To-day she hated it all—city smells, rich, pulsating life. On other days it amused and interested her, gave her a vivid sense of things happening. To-day it irritated her beyond measure.

When she let herself into the apartment at 5 o'clock the telephone was ringing shrilly. She laid David carefully down upon the bed—he was peacefully asleep—and hurried to answer it. Tom's voice said, "Look, dear, is it Elsa's night in?"

"No. Why?" She thought, so we're talking commonplaces while he's deceiving me and my heart's breaking.

"Oh, good gosh, I asked Gibson to dinner before I thought I'm sorry, darling. What shall I do now?"

"You mean Hunt?"

"Yes. Met him outside the Central Hotel an hour ago and it seemed a good idea at the time. I've been trying to get you . . ."

This was reprieve. Gypsy thought, both for him and for her. She steadied her voice. "Oh, Hunt can take pot luck," she told him. "Let him come along."

"That's a good girl. That's a darling."

Gypsy put the phone down with unnecessary vigour. So she was a good girl and a darling, was she? Well, she'd show him!

It was one of David's good nights and that was a bit of luck. Gypsy was permitted to serve dinner without a single interruption. "I don't need any help," she had told Tom with cool finality when he followed her into the kitchen.

"Listen, darling, don't be mad. Honestly, I'm terribly sorry." Tom was frankly puzzled. She had been her old, laughing, delightful self these past few days. Now she had disappeared into her shell against was cool, distant, removed from him.

"It's quite all right." Her politeness was the variety reserved for the perfect stranger.

She had the table set with her prettiest lace and linen cloth, her best china. Her red dress was demurely cut, leaving her rounded arms and throat bare. She had never looked prettier. There was an apricot flush on her cheeks and her eyes burned bright.

"Sweetheart . . ."

But she eluded Tom's arms.

"I'm busy," she said aloofly. "Will you see if the baby's all right? I thought I heard him stirring."

"O. K." Tom wore a faintly puzzled look. Gypsy had never been in this particular mood before.

The little dinner was a complete success so far as the guest was concerned, at least. The soup was a canned green turtle variety with sherry. Gypsy had bought it months before in a moment of unwanted extravagance and had been reserving it ever since for a special occasion.

It lent a touch of elegance to the meal, a simple affair of broasted pork chops and sweet potatoes and string beans.

Tom, who knew how his wife had been treasuring the green turtle soup, lifted his brows in mild surprise as that course appeared. But Gypsy chose to ignore his faint marital signals. Two months ago they would have exchanged glances of delighted recognition. To-night she ignored all his overtures.

Under her surface gaiety her thoughts beat a ceaseless tattoo. Hunt frankly envied their domesticity and said so, and Gypsy smiled brilliantly and said nothing. If he only knew!

It was almost twelve when he rose to go, with apologies for having stayed so late. He held Gypsy's hand for a fraction of a moment longer than courtesy demanded. Admiration shone from his eyes.

"It's been great," he told her. "Will you both come and dine with me some night and see a play?"

"We'd love to." She felt a surge of genuine liking for him. He was simple, direct and honest. You felt he'd never let you down . . . Let down . . . let down . . . as Tom was doing. When he returned from seeing Hunt to the elevator Gypsy was already at the dishes. He came out into the kitchen and took her by the shoulders.

THE GASWORKS DISASTER

EXPERT ATTRIBUTES IT TO CORROSION

Continuing the dramatic evidence he had commenced at a previous hearing, Mr. W. A. Butterfield, of the Asiatic Petroleum Co. (S.C.), Ltd., who was called in by the Government as an expert witness, yesterday told the Coroner's Court inquiring into the circumstances of the West Point gasometer explosion, that corrosion had become so bad that the plates of the container, from their original thickness of 1/10th of an inch, were reduced to 1/40th. He was of the considered opinion that they should have been renewed left. Thus a continuous stream of necessities would be kept flowing over the entire population, banishing poverty and the fear to poverty, involuntary unemployment and insecurity.

WILL YOUTH RID
WORLD OF POVERTY?

Meanwhile the graduates from the service would pass into a society constituted precisely as is our present competitive, individualistic, capitalistic order, and here they would be free to pursue profit, fame, honour, art, fortune or any other object that attracts them. Thus society would embrace two spheres—a sphere of youth where in all able-bodied young persons would pursue first education, and second, a livelihood, and having attained both of these aims would find themselves set free to seek, under conditions of leisure and independence, the aims, material or spiritual, which lay nearest to their hearts.

INDIVIDUAL SELF-DEVELOPMENT.

The endless quarrel between socialism and individualism would then be resolved, for while the period of youth, under the impelling drive of education and a livelihood, would be conducted under a socialistic idea of concerted action, the latter years, after 26 years of age, would be passed under a regime of complete, competitive liberty.

Among other privileges would occur that of accumulating wealth in any amount. The writer believes that the socialist's rancour against capitalism is uncalled for. If capitalism shall be restricted to the traffic in luxuries and surpluses only, and if the necessities of life shall be secured to everyone by concerted effort, Capitalism could continue but its fangs would be drawn. It would then function harmlessly and even beneficently as an incentive to effort and provide a wide, free field of individual self-development.

The money question, which at present appears to be insoluble, would also then fall into order under the touch of reason. In the youth sphere of national service—called in this book for convenience "the Commons"—no money whatever would be used since no products or services would be bought or sold. Money would thus be wiped out altogether in that region where it is doing most harm.

In the opinion of the writer, poverty can never be abolished so long as the necessities whereby men live are bought and sold. To do so is only one step removed from the traffic in human life itself—a practice which our moral sense has already outgrown. We need but to pass on another step to see that a new emancipation proclamation is needed, one that shall free the population from the tyranny of markets, money and somebody else's "purchasing power," and shall secure to it not only its life, but its means of living.

The plan promises a deterrent effect upon crime. A large percentage of our crime, since much of it is being committed by young men under 25 years of age, would be inhibited by the fact that no youths of that age would be unemployed, idle, aimless, and often desperate, but all would be constantly and usefully employed under strict discipline in the honourable service of their country.

THE FREE PORT ISSUE

The controversy on the question of the retention of the Colony's free port status has been taken a stage further in the response made by Mr. F. A. Joseph and Mr. S. H. Dodwell to Sir William Shenton's invitation for a general discussion on the subject. Up to the present, however, it has not been made quite clear whether the advocates of a change in the existing system base their plea primarily on the desirability of protecting local industries from foreign competition, or on the idea of free trade between the various units of the Empire. If the former, it would appear that nothing short of high tariffs would be of real value, and even Mr. Dodwell would prefer preservation of the free port status to action in this direction. On the issue of Imperial reciprocity, we at once encounter a difficulty which Mr. Dodwell is not slow to perceive—namely, the fact that the great bulk of this Colony's products, such as they are, are produced under conditions which would not be tolerated in the Mother Country or the Dominions. It is perfectly true, as Mr. Dodwell points out, that factory regulations in Hongkong are much more rigorous than in most other parts of the East. Our workers, too, compared with those of China Proper, may be described as being not too badly off. But the dominant fact is that the local wage standard is so low when compared with that of England and the Dominions that there is a natural disposition on their part to protect their markets from the competitive effects of our lowly-paid labour. This very circumstance would appear to rule out the possibility of any plan of Imperial reciprocity. One other point remains, namely, the question of inducing China to grant preferential treatment to Hongkong. Neither Mr. Dodwell nor Mr. Joseph are under any delusions on this issue—the former hazards the shrewd guess that China might want as a quid pro quo something very much more than retention of our free port status, whilst Mr. Joseph pertinently raises the most-favoured-nation question. Up to the present, the only concrete proposal put forward on the general issue is Mr. Joseph's idea of thorough investigation by a representative Economic Committee. For ourselves, whilst we have not yet encountered any compelling arguments appearing to justify the experiment of a departure from the Colony's traditional policy, we freely concede that the present is no time in which to persist in pet

NOTES OF THE DAY

HITLER HOMILY

Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini are still the sole repositories of what really transpired at Venice, but there is one thing that Herr Hitler has been unable to conceal, that his visit has improved neither his outlook nor his tone. Back in his own country, he seizes the first opportunity to shout challenge; supposed to have impressed Duce as a dreamer, the Nazi leader no sooner crosses the German border than he blossoms forth afresh as the man of action. An interesting psychological study seems to be offered, perhaps furnishing an important clue to the Nazi destiny for the observer acute enough and capable of conducting the analysis. The immediate concern, however, is Hitler's message and here there is nothing encouraging. He seems plausible enough uncritically examined. In a nutshell, he demands universal adoption of the cult of narrow nationalism. Let Britain look after her own affairs, and the French after theirs, and leave the Nazis to run Germany exactly as they will. This is the crudest ideology even if it contains a kernel of commonsense.

WAVE OF FEAR

Value in the Hitler homily can only lie in causing governments to reflect upon their responsibilities. Undoubtedly, undue attention has been devoted to foreign affairs; the wave of fear has clouded the entire horizon; domestic cares have been, to a large extent, neglected. That there is a distinct relationship between this development and his own activities would either not occur to Herr Hitler or would not impress him. In any case, it is still arguable that if the nations as a whole concentrated for a while upon putting their own houses in order, the close of such a regime might reveal much less cause for anxiety in international affairs.

A MAD MIXTURE

That is as high as the Hitler case can be put. And it was hardly worth establishing. Essentially, the Nazi attitude programme is the negation of international cooperation and understanding and can be no more helpful to Germany than it is to the rest of the world. Nations can no more confine themselves to their own borders to-day than can discover a sane outlook in recognition and acceptance of the fact, prepared as they are plattitudinously to admit it. Small wonder that thinkers spend most of their time speculating on how it will all end. Herr Hitler talks in the terms of the eighteenth century, and acts, in some special directions, as we may expect the world to act, almost generally, perhaps twenty years hence. Britain's idealists, America's futurists, and France's realists, all manage to talk fifty years hence and not diplomatically like the eighteenth century.

DEFEATISM IN THE CHURCH

The same trend of thought carries us along to Bishop Hall's remarkable sermon at the Cathedral on Sunday. It was remarkable in a score of ways—particularly the suggestion, admission or confession that the Sermon on the Mount does not work even in the individual life. In the midst of so much outspoken truth and so much that was helpful, it was astonishing to find this almost all-pervading attitude of defeatism. The does not work becomes to mean that it can not work. And if that is true, there disappears hope for the future. For one must disagree with Bishop Hall's main contention, that it is impossible for any group to act morally in relation to another group, and retain belief in a future, for civilisation. Granted that national groupings offer an exceedingly unhelpful soil, especially when within them even Churches lend themselves to the cultivation of national patriotisms as a paramount virtue. But can the world state, upon which the Bishop all too lightly touched, be pictured without a constitution of interlocking groupings—world controls in a variety of fields—all conforming to a universal code of morality? Is not such a code one of the first essentials, furnishing the driving force to at least the majority of thinking men, before a world state can emerge? And is not the development of that code a grinding gradual, well-nigh heart-breaking task for the nuclei that see the way to-day? The Church must lead if it is not to be left out. At the moment, it appears to be overlooking a growing allegiance to the material conception of history.

WILL YOUTH RID WORLD OF POVERTY?

By PRESTONIA MANN MARTIN

FOR a number of years previous to working out the National Livelihood Plan outlined in my little book "Prohibiting Poverty," it had seemed to me that the chief evil in our social system was not, as the Socialists were always telling us, financial inequality under which some were rich and others poor, but the financial insecurity which menaced all classes, both rich and poor. Nobody was safe, nobody could be sure that his means, whether great or small, might not vanish overnight.

This fact was brought home to me in a painful manner when I was a young girl. My father, anxious to provide for the safety of his family, insured his life in a well-known company, and for nine years he set aside every month $100 to pay the premium. Some months it was hard to find the money, but he and my mother saved and sacrificed and always managed to squeeze out the required sum. At the end of the nine years the company failed and the nine years' savings vanished.

My father turned thereafter to savings banks for safety. In the present depression they, too, and every other known means of obtaining financial security have failed. I became convinced that all forms of money insurance were illusive and that the only real security for old age lies in some arrangement whereby—as in earlier times—the old who can no longer work shall be taken care of by the young who are fresh and strong.

How to establish a due claim on the part of the old upon the labours of the young as a national policy, without placing too heavy a burden upon the young, was the problem. A decent, honest day's work was all that could justly be required of a young person. The question was: Could the effects of that day's work be so multiplied by machinery as to suffice for nine or ten other persons beside the worker himself? I became convinced, and this view was corroborated by experts, that it could be done. Indeed, it is believed that by enlarging and multiplying our machinery our total output could be expanded to almost any desired extent.

The general financial insecurity permeating our society is bound to have an extremely demoralising effect upon our people. Old standards of business honesty began to give way under the pressure of a frantic desire to acquire money in order to safeguard one from poverty and the humiliating dependence upon family, friends, or charity, which all classes dread. This fear-generated an unnatural greed for money. The feeling that it was easier to steal money than to work for it stimulated the crime impulse.

The tragedy of our criminal record, especially among young men, may take its origin in the thought that haunts them: "Why slave all one's life to save up a little, only to have it swept away at any time?" This thought led also to undue extravagance and reckless expenditures, often for vice. "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow the banks may fail and wipe out our savings."

LIVELIHOOD PLAN:

Worst of all, this general insecurity of fortune leads to a condition in which the vast majority of the people must toil unceasingly all their lives, driven by the need to live coupled with fear of the wolf of poverty always waiting at the door. Under such a system the conditions of peace and leisure which are essential for the full ripening of spiritual qualities are not generally attained and millions of people, worn out, without ever having possessed the chance to bring to fruition the talents which lay deep within their natures. In their quiet, serene moments, many feel stirring within them hidden powers and possibilities, but they are saddened by the knowledge that these never can be developed.

The National Livelihood Plan would seek to free mankind forever from this bondage. It would provide that a national livelihood in basic necessities should be furnished to the whole nation by the efforts of the nation's young people—between the ages of 18 and 26, as a continuation of their public school education. Upon the completion of their service they would pass into free competitive society, where, however, they would be provided during all of their lives with an adequate living furnished by the labours of the fresh relays of young recruits always coming up from the schools and taking their places in the ranks.

This plan sounds simple enough; the social consequences flowing from it, however, are enormous. Poverty would be banished forever—and the fear of poverty. Unemployment, as we know it, and the fear of it, would be gone. Crime could not fail to be diminished when all of the young men, at their most restless and dangerous age, were kept strictly and usefully at work, and when their task is accomplished would find themselves safely provided with a livelihood for life and therefore free of much of the incitement to crime.

Best of all, perhaps, men would then return to the normal human practice of living by working (their own work) and not as now, by selling. Independence would then return. A man's well-being, and his very existence, would then depend not upon markets and customers, foreign trade and employers, upon banks or upon somebody else's "purchasing power," but upon his own efforts properly directed and scientifically organized further not only his but also his country's safety and welfare.

The plan itself is very simple. All boys and girls, when they leave high school at 18, would be put to work in a national industrial army, for eight years, using machinery and organisation to the utmost perfection. The stupendous productive power of modern machinery, if run at full capacity—which cannot be done at present—would enable these young workers not only to supply all of their own basic needs, but would furnish the entire nation with a livelihood in such fundamental necessities as food, clothing, shelter, transportation and protection.

When their service completed, the young people would leave the national organisation and disperse to their homes, where they would be provided for the remainder of their lives with all the necessities of life to be furnished by the labours of the fresh recruits coming up from the schools and taking their places in the ranks they have

The Very Idea!

REG SOCKS—ONE

By George

"The Golden Candarcen"

Sixth Instalment

JEEJEEBHOY sighed.

He was within a few hundred yards of meeting Madge and already his hawk-like eye (we forgot to say that Jeejeebhoy carried a marble where his other optic should have been, the transformation having been effected by an accident with a toothpick whilst Jeejeebhoy was at a school party) and already his hawk-like eye (owing to the extra work imposed on it, the remaining eye had become so keen that we feel justified in using the appellation hawk-like) and already his hawk-like eye was roving the seashore looking for a place where he might berth his craft.

Jeejeebhoy sighed.

As he did so his hawk-like eye suddenly alighted on two Chinese who were swimming behind the junk.

Encased in life buoys they were rapidly overhauling the junk, using the dog paddle stroke with their hands and walking on the bottom with their feet. In their teeth they held knives, revolvers, chop-pers, and machine guns whilst the one furthest away was also chewing his moustache.

Holding up his handkerchief to the wind Jeejeebhoy found he was able to add a couple of knots to his speed.

Not to be outdone the Chinese also took out their handkerchiefs and tied knots in them.

They were only a few yards behind when Jeejeebhoy conceived his idea.

Picking up a sock (you will remember that he had pilfered the Steam Laundry's junk) he threw it straight at his leading pursuer. The sock coiled once round his mouth and lay still.

The unfortunate man sank as if struck by a stone.

Two bubbles and a cockroach showed his grave as Jeejeebhoy took off his shoe and marked his thirteenth victim with a notch in his big toe nail.

With a faint gurgle of relief the junk slewed into bank; its engine kicked once in the stern and Jeejeebhoy was there!

(As we promised, Jeejeebhoy is now definitely on his way. Unless we have taken him round in a circle he should be on the same side of the Harbour as Madge by now. What will he do to her when he finds her hair done up in neat skewers? Will he ask her? Questions like this can wait but they won't explain why Jeejeebhoy didn't throw the second sock. What we said about there not being another sock like it in the Colony was all blarney. The laugh is on Jeejeebhoy because he has thrown one of his own socks away! In tomorrow's thrilling instalment of this heart-aching drama we are finally going to bring together these two central figures of romance and passion. While we have been dealing with Jeejeebhoy, Madge has been eating chop suey and now, overcome with dropsy and remorse, she lies half in and half off her bed waiting for succour. Will Reg be the sucker? And which half is on the bed? These and other disturbing matters will have to be gone into tomorrow unless we can get some contributor to write about dogs. Meanwhile we feel that we have punished Jeejeebhoy enough to take away his pursuers. We have already caused him to take away some toe-nail. Besides we are clearing the stage for a little love-making and we don't want any interference. The amah is reading an old English edition of Chaucer's poems and can be kept out of the way.)

"Is this all you have? I don't find these very amusing."

RHODESIAN GOVERNORSHIP

SIR CECIL RODWELL TO RETIRE

London, June 18. The Dominions Office announces that Sir Cecil Rodwell, Governor of Southern Rhodesia, has been granted permission to retire in December next, when he will have completed thirty-five years of service under the Crown.

The King has approved the appointment of Sir Herbert Stanley to succeed Sir Cecil Rodwell.

Sir Herbert Stanley had since 1931 held the posts of High Commissioner for South Africa and High Commissioner in the Union of South Africa for His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom. Sir William Clark, High Commissioner in Canada for His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, has been selected, with His Majesty's approval, to fill the posts in succession to Sir Herbert Stanley. It has also been decided that on the assumption by Sir William Clark of his new posts, the title of the first of these posts, namely the High Commissioner for South Africa, should be altered to that of His Majesty's High Commissioner for Basutoland, Bechuanaland Protectorate and Swaziland.—British Wireless.

R.H.A. MECHANISED BATTERY

INSPECTED BY KING AT WINDSOR

London, June 18. The new mechanised battery of the Third Brigade Royal Horse Artillery was inspected by the King in the courtyard at Windsor Castle to-day.

The King was accompanied by the Queen and the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood, Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone were also present.

The battery consists of six guns drawn by tractors, three wagons, two wireless cars, and six light cars, with two motor cyclist despatch riders. Three of the guns were drawn in front of the King, who examined them and set in the tractors.—British Wireless.

BRITISH CARS WIN

Fine Record In Races In France

London, June 18. British small cars did notably well in the 24-hour Le Mans Grand Prix during the week-end. The Hudge Whitworth Cup for the car obtaining the best ratio between distance covered and minimum distance established for engine capacity, was won by a Riley car, with Singer cars placed second and third.

The Grand Prix for endurance was won by a large Alfa Romeo, but two Rileys came second and third. Six Rileys and five Singers entered for the race and all finished.

The feature of the race was the remarkable manner in which these British small cars, all under 12 horse-power, kept going hour after hour at over 70 miles an hour without a hint of trouble.—British Wireless.

Bidding commenced at $15,000 and the property was finally knocked down to Mr. Lo Yiu-ping, of No. 10 Queen's Road Central, for $17,500.

DR. KOO RETURNING.

LEAVING FOR CHINA IN SIX MONTHS

Amsterdam, June 18. Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese chief representative at Geneva, whose distinguished career has been marked latterly by his outstanding ability during the critical Sino-Japanese controversy, is returning to China in six months.

He will be succeeded at Geneva by Mr. Wu Sze-king, present Minister at The Hague, and one of China's foremost diplomats.—Reuter.

WATER LEVELS.

FOR WEST, NORTH AND EAST RIVERS

The River Conservancy Commission for Kwangtung Province notifies that the height of water in English feet in the West, North and East Rivers is as follows:

	June 16	June 17
West River at Shihing	20.3	20.6
North River at Tsin	14.0	14.0
East River at Shihing	10.5	17.8
East River at Shihing	5.6	4.8

In our report of the motor mishap, in which Mr. E. B. Reed and Mr. J. W. Alabaster were involved, it was inadvertently stated that the accident occurred at 3.40 a.m. on Sunday morning. This was a typographical error, and should have read 1.40 a.m.

There was a clean bill of health in the Colony during the week-end.

MISREPRESENTATION.

CHINA LIGHT AND POWER CO'S. WARNING

It has come to the notice of the China Light and Power Company (1918) Limited that prior to and after their inspecting Engineers' visits to consumers' premises, certain individuals have called on consumers and represented themselves to be connected with the company and authorized by it to enter consumers' premises to test installations or to carry out repairs.

In a special notice to consumers, the Company again draws the attention of all consumers, and the public generally, to the fact that all authorized Asiatic employees of the Company carry with them Identification Cards bearing the photograph, name and number of the bearer and the embossed stamp of the Company, which they are instructed to show to any consumer on demand, and consumers are, in their own interests, requested to demand to see these Identification Cards and to refuse admission to any workman who cannot show such a card.

The Company also wishes consumers to understand clearly that they do not undertake any jobbing, contracting or repair work on Consumers' installations, that the Company's workmen are forbidden to undertake such work privately, that the Company have no "official contractor", that a Consumer is at liberty to engage any competent individual or firm to carry out work on his installation and that the Company does not in any way guarantee or accept any responsibility for any work done by any individual or firm of contractors even although the installation may be passed by the Company's Engineers for connection to the Supply.

ENGLAND IS DRY.

LACK OF RAIN STILL SERIOUSLY FELT

London, June 18. Britain still lies in the area of a big anti-cyclone and there is every prospect of warm, sunny weather continuing. During the past month measurable rain has fallen in London on only two occasions, the amount being 0.02 inches.

At the week-end the temperature reached 87 degrees in some places, the highest since last August.

Although in the Metropolitan area no immediate restrictions on the use of water are to be enforced, people are asked to exercise reasonable economy, not to wash motorcars excessively, not to be extravagant with garden hoses and to put less water in their baths.

In several other parts of the country, however, and notably in many rural areas the drain on water resources causes anxiety and in some places hardship. Sunny weather, on the other hand, has favoured innumerable sporting and social functions held at this time of year and the present conditions promise to continue for Ascot, where the famous race meeting opens to-morrow.

During its four days "Royal Ascot" will again be favoured by the presence of the King and Queen, who in accordance with custom, will drive to the meeting in semi-state each day.—British Wireless.

DIMINUTIVE CHINESE GIRL PLAYS LEAGUE TENNIS

MISS CHEUNG PEEPS OVER THE NET AT THE K.C.C.

GIVES PROMISING DISPLAY FOR CHINESE RECREATION CLUB

HO KA-LAU'S SINGLES CAMPAIGN AGAINST ALL-COMERS

YESTERDAY'S MATCH DESCRIBED

(By "Veritas").

The unusual sight of a little girl, whose height only allowed her to peep over the top of the net, volleying, backhand, and forehand driving against the Fincher brothers and Bertie Guest, was seen at the Kowloon Cricket Club yesterday, when the Chinese Recreation Club were the visitors in a Mixed Doubles league match.

Miss Cheung, partnering W. C. Hung, was the young lady in question, and although faced with every disadvantage associated with this type of tennis, she gave a most praiseworthy account of herself.

For one of such a tender age and diminutive figure, Miss Cheung has her ground strokes developed to an unusual degree of power and accuracy. She has already mastered the overhead service, and her self assurance on the court is an attribute which a number of older and very much more experienced players might profitably be endowed with.

Miss Cheung has started in the right direction at the right age, and although her tennis cannot seriously be claimed to be up to the requirements of to-day's mixed doubles league standard, there should be a very pleasant and successful future for this young player.

C. R. C. DIFFICULTIES.

This year the Chinese Recreation Club are experiencing what almost every other club has at some time or another—a dearth of lady players. Robbed of the services of Mrs. Litton and Mrs. F. T. Lo, as well as deprived of the worthy assistance of the Lo brothers, the C.R.C. are struggling to find new combinations.

Of last season's championship team, only three players figured in yesterday's game, they being Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau, and Mrs. Chui Chun-chui. In addition to M.W. Lo and Mrs. Litton, the Chinese were without the help of Tani Yui-pui, and Tam Yoc-fong, who deputised for the local champion could do very little right.

The only combination to offer any resistance to the K.C.C. were Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau. Even here it was more a case of Ho Ka-lau versus the Rest. With Ho Ka-lau dominating the middle of the court, Mrs. Ho had to play a very passive part, and such tactics continually had their repercussions with both players driven out of position.

Ho Ka-lau's insistence on going up on everything was quickly set at naught by E.C. Fincher and Mrs. Wilson, the latter being clever enough with her drives to put the ball past Ho.

One felt that Ho Ka-lau could have shown a little more confidence in his partner without seriously jeopardising their chances of winning points.

CLEVER MRS. CHUI.

Quite the most outstanding lady on view was Mrs. Chui Chun-chui, who played especially well in the third set against Guest and Miss Griffiths. Very often the exchanges determined themselves into duels between Mrs. Chui and Guest, and when it is said that the former by no means came of the worst, the value of her display can easily be appreciated.

Her confidence restored after a somewhat upsetting initial set against Teddy Fincher and Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Chui took to the net with excellent results against E.C. Fincher and Mrs. Miller, and played a big part in the winning of the set.

Had Tam Yoc-fong revealed more stability, the pair might well have won a couple of sets. Tam was completely out of touch at the net, and only occasionally brought off a stop-volley winner.

K. C. C. PROSPECTS.

Whillie Hung, who is fast becoming one of the Colony's most stylish players, played extremely well, but had too much to attempt to be able to accomplish a great deal successfully.

NO MATCHES TO-DAY.

In consequence of the heavy rain this morning and the stormy conditions, to-day's "A" Division league tennis has been cancelled, and this block of matches will follow after the completion of the scheduled programme.

The affected games are:
H.K.C.C. v C.R.C. (1)
U.S.R.C. v K.C.C.
I.R.C. v C.R.C. (3)
C.R.C. (2) v S.C.A.A.
C.C.C. v Recrelo

CLOSE CALL FOR JACKIE BROWN

Flyweight Title Holder Forced To A Draw.

London, June 18. Jackie Brown, holder of the World's Flyweight championship, only just managed to retain his title at Manchester to-night, when he met Angelmann, the Frenchman, over a fifteen round fight with the title at stake.

The result was declared a draw, both boxers putting up a lively show, with Angelmann a very strong challenger.—Reuter.

REVERSE FOR NEW YORK YANKEES

Sustain Nose Out By Detroit

New York, June 18. Only three baseball results in the American League have been received at the time of going to press. The Yankees sustained a set-back being noised out by Detroit, but Boston, Red Sox were in aggressive mood against St. Louis and scores 14 runs. Tietje blanked out the Athletics on behalf of the Chicago White Sox.

Scores as cabled by Reuter were.

Chicago	5	7	2
Philadelphia	0	2	1
(Tietje pitched. Rain stopped play after five innings.)
St. Louis	9	13	0
Boston	14	17	1
Detroit	6	11	3
New York	5	9	0
(Gehrig and Grossett homered)

The match hardly provides a true perspective in judging the prospects of the K.C.C., against the United Services next week. But reflection on their first encounter three weeks ago encourages one to believe that the K.C.C. are capable of winning, providing E.C. Fincher and Mrs. Wilson win at least two sets. The balance, however, is with the U.S.R.C. who have not only a better all-round team, but are playing on their own courts.

Round By Round Description Of Baer-Carnera Fight

Former Champion Receives A Terrific Thrashing From Challenger

The following is a vivid round by round description of the Max Baer v. Carnera fight for the heavyweight championship of the world, which took place at Madison Square Gardens last Thursday.

ROUND ONE.

After a quick clinch Baer missed a left to the head. Carnera pumped three lefts to the mouth. Baer's right smash knocked Carnera down but the Ambulant Alp was up without a count. Baer came right back with a terrific attack and Carnera bounced up and down from the canvas three times. Under the terrific pounding the champion reeled from rope to rope. Baer's round.

ROUND TWO.

Baer, tearing in viciously for a kill, nailed Carnera with a right smash to the head. Both tumbled to the floor. Both crashed again as Baer landed a right high to the head. Carnera, fighting at bay, doggedly held the challenger off. As Baer momentarily seemed punched out, Carnera quickly recovering drove him to the ropes clubbing him about the head in his first real offensive. It was Baer's round.

ROUND THREE.

Both opened the canvas with a rush from the ropes like a pair of prehistoric cavern men and drove away to the center. Carnera's corner where again the giant was crushed under the fury of Baer's two-listed smashes to the head. The referee separated the pair at the bell. It was Baer's round.

ROUND FOUR.

Baer waited in his corner as Primo, with a reckless show of courage, despite the numerous blows he had taken, marched into the attack. He tried to reach Baer with a long left as they circled in midring. Baer, sneering, backed to the ropes. Carnera, sticking doggedly to his task, moved in and drove a long right into Baer's chin. Baer ducked and swept both fists deep into Carnera's body, but quickly moved away again. He seemed slow and tiring as the champion kept ceaselessly after him, stabbing with lefts and landing once in every two tries. It was Carnera's round.

ROUND FIVE.

With no letup in the ferocity of the action, the champion staggered when Baer smashed another right to the side of the head. Like some strange monster fighting for its life Carnera hung on desperately to Baer. At the bell he wobbled, rubber-legged to his corner, his face a bloody mask and his lips twice their normal size. Baer's round.

ROUND SIX.

Baer came up slowly, danced across the ring and shuffled in the resin. In Carnera's corner he cut loose and buried his right deep in Carnera's body. Swinging both hands madly for the champion's face Max missed both left and right before he drilled a terrific left hook to the head and crossed a right to Carnera's jaw. He then hit him with a two-fisted blast to the body which nearly swept him off his feet. Carnera pressed forward like a wrecked battleship and held desperately as Baer met him with another terrific right to the head. Carnera's legs were buckling and he could scarcely stand but he never stopped punching. Carnera was wild, though, and Baer rained a right then a left into the Champion's huge body before crossing a right to the chin. The round was about even.

ROUND SEVEN.

Baer crouched before the champion looking for a right hand opening. A trickle of blood came from the left side of Baer's head. They swapped lefts and rights in a furious body exchange and both dropped back. Baer sneered deadly at Carnera a business-like way pushed Max across the ring with a stream of lefts and righted Baer on the ropes. Referee Donovan warned Carnera for backhand punching. Baer drilled a right to the body but Carnera stuck doggedly to the task of hopping the challenger's head with lefts as Baer strutted and grinned and posed for his friends at the ringside. Carnera caught Baer on the head and smashed both hands to the head forcing Baer to take him seriously. Carnera's round.

ROUND EIGHT.

Carnera seemed to have all his great strength back as he danced across the ring and stabbed Baer's face with a long left. Max took a few then turned slaughterer driving a traffic left hook and right smash to the body, hitting a crashing overhead to Carnera's temple. The giant shook off the terrific bombardment but ran into another straight right to the side of the head that mashed the flesh under his left eye. Baer's right was low but he drove a terrific right back of Carnera's ear. The giant was wobbling again and a left hook brought a stream of blood from his nose. Baer stood and looked Carnera over. The champion, his face now a gargoyle's mask, weakly beckoned him to come in and Baer did. Carnera lunged to get away and fell flat in his own corner, rising without a count. Donovan called a low blow on Baer which cost Max the round.

ROUND NINE.

Carnera seemed much weaker and Baer stalked in like a merciless panther grunting and baring his teeth for the kill. Carnera's courage was not unshaken. He crowded forward jabbing Baer off balance with his left. Baer dove in headlong, missed a long left but drove a long right to the body. Primo beckoned him to come in and fight. Baer again drove a headlong right into Carnera's chest. Carnera did not complain and came back with two uppercuts which shot Max's head back, though the cham-

ROUND TEN.

Champion's legs were floundering under him. Baer landed left hook to the body and a right which glanced off the champion's shoulder. Carnera's round, by a shade.

ROUND ELEVEN.

Baer was cautious as Carnera stumbled his terrifically beaten hulk out of his corner. A long right to the chin floored the champion, but he came up without a count. Baer smashed about the head, but dead game, the champion swung his hands aimlessly at the challenger, and even whipped a hard left and right to the head and the mid-ring. Carnera's legs were scarcely holding him but he managed to throw a long right to the head before Baer dropped him with a long left to the chin. As the champion came up Donovan stopped the fight saying Baer was the world's champion on a technical knockout, two minutes and sixteen seconds after the round opened.

ROUND TWELVE.

Baer was cautious as Carnera stumbled his terrifically beaten hulk out of his corner. A long right to the chin floored the champion, but he came up without a count. THE DAVIS CUP

AUSTRALIA ONLY JUST MANAGES IT

DEFEATS FRANCE BY THE ODD RUBBER IN FIVE

MERLIN BEATS MCGRATH BUT JACK CRAWFORD CLINCHES ISSUE

Paris, June 18. Australia to-day qualified to meet Czechoslovakia in the final of the European Zone of the Davis Cup contest by beating France by the odd rubber in five. This is the second year in succession Australia has reached this stage of the contest; last year they were beaten by England.

Jack Crawford, whose defeat by Andre Merlin on Saturday was the only real surprise result of the match, redeemed himself to-day when he clinched the issue for Australia by defeating C. Boussus in a tense five-set struggle.

Afterwards, Merlin, one of the most improved players in Europe this year, went on to beat Vivian McGrath as anticipated in four sets.

Crawford was trailing right through his encounter with Boussus and it was not until the fourth set that he succeeded in establishing a dominance which finally saw him run away with the final set to love.

MAGNIFICENT BOUSSUS.

Boussus played a magnificently fighting game. He took the initial set to two, and the third after ten games. During this period Crawford was continuing to commit the errors he made against Merlin, his play lacking imagination.

With defeat staring him in the face, however, the Australian asserted his personality, and assuming the offensive, he swept Boussus off his feet with a series of brilliant rallies. He had Boussus literally standing still in the fifth set.

Although nothing hung on the result of the final tie between Merlin and McGrath, there was never any doubt as to the Frenchman's superiority. He dropped the first set, but there after was always in the ascendant, and the next three sets were his for the loss of only four games. He finished the final set in the same whirlwind fashion as did Crawford earlier on.

The detailed results as cabled by Reuter were:

J. Crawford (Australia) beat C. Boussus (France) 2-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0.

A. Merlin (France) beat V. McGrath (Australia) 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-0.

Australia and Czechoslovakia now meet to determine the right of playing America in the Inter-Zone final at Wimbledon on July 21, 23, and 24. The European Zone final match has to be completed by July 16.

Orient A.A.A. Has Support Of Japan

TOKYO TO BE ATHLETIC VENUE

Tokyo, June 18. The newly-created Amateur Athletic Association of the Orient to-day is an athletic body enjoying the full support of the Japanese Amateur Athletic Association, which extended approval of its creation at a meeting of the executive committee last night.

The committee, in its session, decided that the first athletic congress to be held under the auspices of the AAAO will be in Tokyo this October.

The AAAO was created in Manila recently by Japan and the Philippines, upon recommendation of the former, after it had introduced a motion dissolving the Far Eastern Athletic Association, Premier Oriental sports body for many years at the FEAA congress.

China, formerly a charter member of the FEAA, is not a member of the newly-created AAAO, to whose creation she entertained strenuous objection. Japan introduced a resolution creating the AAAO after the Philippines and China had voted against modifying the FEAA's original constitution.

THE LONDON TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS.

AN EARLY RESULT FROM QUEEN'S CLUB.

London, June 18. The London tennis championships started to-day at Queen's Club and will be continued until Saturday, when the finals are scheduled. Among the first results was the defeat of J. T. San by Pennell. Pennell won in two straight sets by the scores of 6-4, 6-4.—Reuter.

AUSSIES WELL HELD

RUN-MAKING HARD AT LORD'S

AMATEURS BAT CONSISTENTLY

London, June 18. The Gentlemen of England gallantly held their own against the Australians at Lord's to-day, when they sent back the remainder of the visiting batsmen for an additional 66 runs to Saturday's close of play score of 164 for 6.

This enabled the Australians to hold a first innings lead of 53. E. R. T. Holmes of Middlesex, and F. R. Brown of Surrey were the most successful bowlers, the former capturing 3 for 31, and his colleague 3 for 45.

The Gentlemen found run-getting a tedious matter when they batted a second time, but they improved their total, finishing with a score of 287.

Scoring was consistent, with three batsmen contributing the major portion of the runs. B. H. Lyon of Somerset hit up 67. R. W. V. Robins scored 64, while C. F. Walters helped with 40. B. H. Valentine, said to be in the running for Test match captaincy was out of luck, and lost his wicket after scoring three.

Set with the task of scoring 235 to win, the Australians put together 11 without loss before stumps were drawn for the day.—Reuter.

FILIPINO SWIMMERS FOR TOKYO?

Japanese Invitation To Olympic Stars

Tokyo, June 18. The Japanese Swimming Athletic Association to-night announced that Jikrum Adalin and Teofilo Ydofonso, famed Filipino breast-stroke swimmers, will be invited to participate in the Japanese national swimming championships to be held in August.

Simultaneously, Kelo University athletic authorities revealed that Harvard University's baseball team will arrive in Japan in August for a series of games with Kelo, and other Japanese teams.

Three of America's outstanding swimmers have been invited and accepted the invitation—to compete in the Japanese national championships. By inviting renowned competition the Japanese expect to develop their younger stars faster, thus qualifying them for the world Olympic games in Berlin in 1936.

Ydofonso and Jikrum, two of the world's outstanding exponents of the breast stroke, are in Manila. During the recent Tenth Far Eastern Championship Games, Ydofonso defeated Reizo Kolke, Japan's best breaststroker, in the finals of the 200 metre breast-stroke event while his team-mate Jikrum, placed third. Both Ydofonso and Kolke, however, established new Far Eastern records for the event.

OVER SHATIN PASS.

Despite the greater heat caused by a late start, the Hongkong Cycling Club's run last week-end was well attended as usual, and a pleasant, though extremely arduous, spin was immensely enjoyed.

Mr. C. Read (Captain) led the party from the Ferry at 11 a.m. to Shamshui, where repairs outlaid were replenished as a rough trip was anticipated. The route then lay by way of Pak-shuk to Tin-lui and Shatin-lui, the cluster of small Chinese villages near Shatin Station. The stone foot-bridge was crossed and it was then suggested that Shatin Pass would be a fine objective. To reach the track leading upwards to the Pass it was necessary to cross 400 yards of paddy fields, and by the time the last muddy terrace had been reached all were suffering from the effects of frequent wading in the mire.

A first glimpse of the path indicated that the party were "in for it, good and proper", and only the Captain and the founder of the Club (Mr. L.A.G. Kenter) decided to continue. By this time the sun was at its strongest and after a further hour's hard climbing the pair stripped off and plunged into the cool depths of a pool in the valley followed by the track. The many small waterfalls along this route were the forepieces of many pretty scenes, whilst they also provided the riders with their sole refreshment in the form of water.

Shortly after resuming the climb a much rusted iron sign-post with three arms, still in fair condition, made a weak attempt to direct the riders to another trail. The author of the "bending process" failed to realize, however, that maps exist giving these tracks, which probably in past days were much used by bands of smugglers and landlits.

The climb was not without an incident of a humorous kind. Our "adventurer" had parked their steel steeds on a narrow stone bridge whilst they quenched their thirst in the stream. As they returned to the bridge a sprightly gust whispered to the machine that they, too, would enjoy a cool bath; the next moment saw them plunge into the depths below.

A Slow Climb.

The Pass was reached to the accompaniment of a sharp shower, at 3 p.m. the three-mile climb having taken the two riders nearly three hours to accomplish. The view from its lofty height was unique, almost the whole of the northern shores of the Island being in sight, with the Peninsula at the cyclists' feet. A considerable time was spent resting here, whilst the view and refreshments from a neighbouring Chinese house were enjoyed in concert.

The track to Fo Kong, nestling at the foot of the Pass, proved hazardous and exciting, being pregnant with dangerous gullies and studded with broken rocks and stones. It has a name, however, this being "Shik-hawati Road" and was laid in 1910 by the 13th Rajputs. The worthy Indians would hardly recognise their handiwork now that the ravages of 24 years have made such inroads into both surface and foundations. It is very doubtful even if any motor vehicle could reach the Pass at the present day from the South; from the North it is a definite impossibility for vehicles.

The two cyclists finally reached Shamshui at 4.30 p.m., a total of 25 miles having taken no less than 5½ hours. However, Shatin Pass has at last succumbed to the wheels of cyclists.

Next week's effort will be of a less

FILIPINO FLASH WINSVERDICT AGAINST CHICAGOANSMART BOXING DISPLAY

Sacramento, Cal., June 14. Ceferino Garcia, Filipino coast waterweight champion, once again demonstrated the power of his punch to-night by stopping Tommy Herman of Chicago in the third of a scheduled ten round bout.

It was Ceferino's fourth victory of the year by either a knockout, or technical knockout. Garcia, tipping the scales at 148, was outwitted three rounds by Herman. The disadvantage in weight, however, apparently affected him for the better rather than for the worse. The Filipino was his usual clever self and rained punches on his opponent from all directions. Herman, in a vain attempt to stem the deluge of defeat, staged occasional surges but they were inconsequential.

The end came after a mix-up in the third when Garcia brought up a terrific punch that stopped Herman dead in his tracks.

ON UPGRADE.

Garcia, on the uphill grade after a disastrous knockout defeat sustained at the hands of Young Peter Jackson, coloured welter, on April 10, has beaten in quick succession Baby Sal Sorris, whom he stopped in four rounds, and Billy Boggs of Honolulu, whom he took in the fifth of a scheduled 10-rounder.

Garcia, always a powerful puncher, has steadily been improving on getting all of his weight behind his blows. He has, in the past year and a half, won fourteen bouts via the short route. In return, over that same period, however, he has been stopped twice. On July 25, 1933, Kid Azteca of Mexico scored a 1-k. over Garcia in eight rounds. Then, this year, Jackson put the Filipino out in 3 rounds.

London, June 18.

The Australian cricketers were today received at Windsor Castle by their Majesties, who shook hands with each one and were subsequently photographed with them. Immediately after the official photographer had finished each of the Australian players left the group and took his own snapshot of his colleagues. The process lasted fifteen minutes, during which time their Majesties talked with the players.

energetic nature and Mr. C. Read will again lead the party. He intends to pay a visit to Castle Peak Bay where a hut is to be made for bathing, and probably a hike. The rendezvous will be on the Kowloon side, but the usual site at the Star Ferry has been abandoned in favour of the space at the Yaumati Vehicle Ferry, and interested cyclists are cordially invited to meet there at 9 a.m.

This recreation is partially due to the fact that the Vehicle Ferry enters for the transmission of cyclists at a rate 50% lower than the Star Ferry, and thereby removes a serious objection to mainland runs for the Islander and vice versa.—Contributed.

EASY POINTS.

The United Services yesterday obtained easy points at the expense of the Ladies Recreation Club, winning by seven sets to two.

Once again Goldman and Mrs. Kayll captured all three sets, and indications are that they will go through the season with this record, unless they have it upset next Monday.

K.C.C. v. C.R.C.

Mrs. W. H. Wilson and E. C. Fincham (K.C.C.) beat Tam Yoc-fong and Mrs. C. Chiu 6-2; beat Miss Cheung and W. C. Lung 7-5; beat Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau 6-1.

Mrs. Miller and E. F. Fincher (K.C.C.) lost to Mrs. Chiu and Tam 2-6; beat Miss Cheung and Hung 6-1; tied with Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau.

Miss Griffiths and A. E. P. Guest (K.C.C.) beat Mrs. Chiu and Tam 6-4; beat Miss Cheung and Hung 6-0; lost to Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau 5-7.

U.S.R.C. v. I.R.C.

Mrs. Kayll and Goldman (U.S.R.C.) beat Dr. and Mrs. Traill 6-1; beat Miss Thomas and Armstrong 6-0; beat Miss Patterson and Dunham 6-1.

Mrs. Lewis Bryan and Cannon (U.S.R.C.) beat Dr. and Mrs. Traill 6-4; lost to Miss Thomas and Armstrong 3-6; beat Miss Patterson and Dunham 6-1.

FORMER HOLDERS KEEP CLEAR IN NEW DRAWSecond Round Of Singles Up
To July 12

LAST EIGHT IN RINKS EVENT

The sub-committee in charge of the local lawn bowls open championships met last evening when Mr. B. E. Maughan, President of the Hongkong Lawn-Bowls Association made the draw for the second round of the Singles, the third round of the Pairs and the third round of the Rinks championships.

The singles event has provided some interesting ties. Only two former champions remain in the competition, U. M. Omar drawing with Mr. and Mrs. A. Gutierrez, being matched against J. J. Basto.

For the next rounds the matches are being spread over a longer period than in the preliminary rounds, only four games being arranged for each day in the singles and two or three for the pairs. The Rinks championship matches need not be concluded until July 9 next.

The full draw for the three championships is appended:

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Solution to Previous Contract Problem.

I have often stated, and repeat, that at no time have you the right to jeopardise your contract by trying for an extra trick. If the contract is safe, then you may play for the extra trick. But if the failure of the play you are about to make might, by any possible chance, lose your contract, you should play the hand safely.

However, on the defence, what difference does it make whether the declarer makes three no trump

♠ 10 8 6 5		♥ J 3		♦ J 4 3		♣ A 7
♠ 8 4 2		♥ A 7		♦ 8 5 4 3		♣ 8 6 5

or four? If you can find a play that may defeat the contract, you have a right to risk one or even two tricks. In other words, if the play fails, the declarer will make four or five odd, while if it works you will defeat the contract, of three no trump—then try your daring play.

The Play

West's opening lead was a small heart, which East won with the ace and returned a heart, declarer playing the nine and dummy winning the trick with the jack. A club is returned, South playing the ten and West winning the trick with the ace.

West opened a weak heart suit and when his partner won that with the ace, and returned a heart, he practically said that he had nothing in his hand. In other words, he had no suit that he believed he could develop.

Therefore, it looked as though the only tricks that East and West could make were the ace of hearts, the ace of clubs, and the ace and king of spades. Why not try a tricky play?

Lead the nine of spades, hoping that your partner has the jack and knowing the declarer will not dare go in with the queen. Of course, if you do, this play will defeat the contract, because the declarer will play the ten from dummy, East will win with the jack, return a spade and you will cash your ace and king, defeating the contract one trick.

If your play fails, you will have lost only one trick, which means nothing.

Today's Contract Problem

How would you proceed to make a grand slam at no trump, if you held the West hand, North opened a club, and South let you win the first trick with the king of clubs? Just a question of giving your opponents a chance to make a mistake.

CINEMA SCREENINGS.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Lanny Ross, the young radio singer, making his screen debut in Paramount's "Melody in Spring," which is having its final showings to-day at the Alhambra Theatre became a singer because he was forced into it. The popular tenor, who is featured in this musical, musical, love story with Chaele Ruggles, Mary Boland and Ann Southern, revealed recently that he once actually detested the idea of singing for anything but his own amusement. In spite of this, his career started early. He knew music even before he could walk. His mother was a famous accompanist, and naturally played to her home. When Lanny was seven, he became a member of the choir in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York. And from then on, he had nothing more to say about it. He had a scholarship to Taft school in Watertown, Conn., and gravitated into the Glee Club. He went to Yale and the same thing happened. He paid his way through Columbia Law School by singing on the radio. Eventually Ross became reconciled to being a singer, and started taking voice lessons. Now his ambition is to be a concert singer. "Melody in Spring" his first picture, Ross plays an ambitious warbler who falls in love with the daughter of a famous radio advertiser. The only way he can interest the big radio man is by feigning some sort of a hobby; the old man is nuts about collecting bedposts. So taking to mountain climbing, the young chap starts his love affair in New Jersey, carries it through all kinds of humorous incidents in Europe and ends it with a kiss back in Jersey on the Dog Biscuit hour. Norman McLeod directed the picture.

"Let's Be Ritzy"

The tiny one-room walk-up apartment of a $30-a-week clerk and the glittering country home of a wealthy broker form the background of "Let's Be Ritzy," Universal Pictures' comedy-drama of young married life which is showing at the King's Theatre. The early scenes of the film take place in the furnished flat of Jimmy (Lew Ayres) and his beautiful and ambitious wife, Ruth (Patricia Ellis). There they cook, eat and sleep in an "in-a-door" bet and sleep in an "in-a-door" bet. By posing as the son of a wealthy South American rubber magnate, Jimmy not only discourages his landlady, Pembroke (Berton Churchill) from evicting him for non-payment of the rent, but gets an invitation to spend a week-end at the huge Pembroke country estate. At the Pembroke home, wealth predominates, of course, and the scenic artists of Universal studios spared no pains or money to make the sets faithful copies of similar rooms in the dwellings of the rich. As a matter of fact, one of the huge ballrooms is an exact replica of one in the California country estate home of a wealthy and nationally known oil millionaire. Supporting Jimmy in the picture are Patricia Ellis, the inimitable Frank McHugh, Isabel Jewell, Berton Churchill, the veteran Robert McWade and Hedda Hopper. "Let's Be Ritzy" was directed by Edward Ludwig.

"If I Had A Million"

Fifteen stars, largest number ever assembled for a single picture, share honours in "If I Had A Million" showing at the Oriental Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday with more than 50 players of high rank on stage and screen are cast in the picture in addition to the stars. The stars are Gory Cooper, George Raft, Wynne Gibson, Charles Laughton, Jack Oakie, Frances Dee, Charlie Ruggles, Alison Skipworth, W. C. Fields, Mary Boland, Gene Raymond, Lucien Littlefield, Richard Bennett and others. Such well-known character players as Grant Mitchell, Edward E. Gribbon, Berton Churchill, William V. Mong, Eddie Ellsler, Joyce Compton, Cecil Cunningham, Clarence Muse, Kent Taylor, John Sainpolis and Helene Chadwick play roles in the supporting cast. Eight other "names" of importance also had a hand in the picture. They were the directors who combined their talents in the production: Ernest Lubitsch, Norman Taurog, Stephen Roberts, Norman McLeod, James Cruze, William A. Selter and Bruce Humphreys.

"David Harum"

Will Rogers has signed a new long term contract with Fox Film, the company with which he has been associated since his first talking picture, Rogers' success under the Fox banner—which started with "They Had To See Paris" in 1929—has been unique in the history of motion pictures. At present, his latest released vehicle, "Mr. Skitch," is leading its field in

Are You Too Easily Tired?

Many young women and girls, who ought to be full of life and vigour, are quickly tired, pale, nervous, and generally run-down. These symptoms—like the frequent headaches, spells of dizziness, pains in the back and limbs, which beset many older women—are all indications of an anemic condition, the result of thin, watery, impure blood.

To correct these troubles and prevent worse ill, for when the blood is below par disease germs are able to multiply and flourish, the surest and quickest way is by tonic treatment through the blood. For this purpose there is nothing better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, renowned for more than fifty years as a splendid blood builder and nerve tonic. Recent tests made by a qualified physician have proved fully to confirm the efficacy of this old and well tried remedy for building up the quality and quantity of the blood. Anemic men and women should begin a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills without delay. You know better by now that you are taking a great benefit to others in the same run-down condition. Weak, pale, thin-blooded children will likewise derive great benefit from a course of these tonic pills, and they are particularly valuable as a builder after colds, flu, measles and whooping cough. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are obtainable from chemists everywhere.

REBEL'S PENALTY

LITHUANIAN LEADER SENT TO PRISON

Kovno, June 18. M. Waldemaras, former Premier of Lithuania, who led the unsuccessful military putsch on June 7 last, was court-martialled and sentenced to twelve years hard labour to-day.

Two days after the putsch, the Cabinet sought to resign but accepted the President's invitation to remain in office until a reorganisation was possible. Rumours were then rife that M. Waldemaras, who possesses a wide following, would be given a post in the new Cabinet. His sentence, was therefore, the more startling. —United Press.

box-office returns, while the two pictures preceding it, "State Fair" and "Dr. Bull," were equally successful. His latest starring role is in the production of "David Harum," a story that was selected for him after he had received thousands of requests from fans urging him to play the part. Rogers, upon signing the contract, expressed himself as happy in the extension of his association with Fox Film. "David Harum" is to be seen at the King's Theatre on Thursday.

MARRIED FLIRTS

"I'll pick these up and you can leave them for Elsa."

She slipped out of his grasp. She whirled, facing him. "Take your hands off me!"

Was it really she who said those ugly words? They echoed in the quiet room.

"What's the matter, darling?" She flung herself back to the sink, running hot water into the enamel pan, winking back the fierce hot tears.

"You're asking me that!" Tom's tone was patient, inquiring. "Honestly, if I know what this was all about! I didn't know you were going to be so burned up about a guest for dinner. Besides, I thought you liked..."

"That's got nothing to do with it," she said thickly and painfully. "Hunt's grand, I'm fond of him. It's you..."

"What have I done now?" "Oh, this can't be us... it can't be, ran Gypsy's wild thoughts. Quarrelling... shouting at each other... without dignity or love or tenderness..."

"I saw you today," she gave him a level glance. She continued to wash cups, meticulously and daintily, without being conscious of what she was doing.

"Saw me? Where?" He red-dened slightly.

"With Vera Gray." "Ah, that! Honestly, sweet-heart, I would have told you about it before if we'd been alone."

But she would not let him go on. "Never mind lying," she said. "It doesn't matter. Only—I know where I stand now. I'm parked with the baby and the house and everything. You can go and do as you please, lunch and dine and dance with other people and call it business. Deceive me. Lie to me. You know I'm safe at home."

"It was business, I tell you," Tom almost sneered. "I had to have a conference with her. I couldn't get out of it. She was dashing out to Queens to see this chap. The Nussik people."

"It looked like business," Gypsy supplied bitterly. "You had her arm—she acted as if she owned you. You both walked right past me."

"Where? How? When?" But she was silent. What use to go over the old ground? He had broken his word. That was all she needed to know.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CLUB.

FORMED AT INAUGURAL MEETING OF ENTHUSIASTS

Approximately 40 photographic enthusiasts gathered together at the Lane, Crawford's Restaurant yesterday afternoon to discuss the possibilities of forming a photographic club in Hongkong.

J. C. Grenham presided at the meeting.

It was generally agreed to form a club, to be known as the "Hongkong International Photographic Society." The first aim would be to establish a club-house and the formation of a dark-room, the idea being to start the society in a small way and to work upwards.

The following committee was elected:

President.—Mr. J. C. Grenham.

Hon. Treasurer.—Mr. S. B. Tan.

Committee.—Dr. F. Banje, Messrs. Peter Dragon, R. P. Dunlop, C. L. Chau, A. Betts, and K. Juno.

After some discussion, it was agreed that the subscription should be fixed at $2 per month, with an entrance fee of $5.

PLANS FOR CENTENARY ADVANCED

Plans for a proposed centenary, in commemoration of Dr. Robert Morrison's death, were advanced another stage yesterday, when a Committee recently elected to go into the question held its first meeting at St. John's Cathedral Hall.

A number of proposals were put forward for the anniversary to be commemorated in a fitting manner, this to include special religious services, special addresses and articles in connection with the life and works of the missionary pioneer, and possibly a pilgrimage to the last resting place of the missionary at Macao.

Three sub-committees were appointed to go into the questions connected with finance, education and religion, and decisions reached by them will be made known in due course.

The meeting of the General Committee held yesterday was presided over by Sir William Hornell, C.I.E., LL.D., M.A., who was supported by Hon. Sir William Shearman and the Rev. E. G. Powell as Vice-Chairman; Mr. J. L. McPherson, Hon. Secretary; and Mr. T. E. Pearce, Hon. Treasurer.

DARING PIRACY

TWO BRITISH NAVAL OFFICERS CAPTURED

Chefoo, June 18. The new steamer Shuntien, on her second voyage from Tangku to Chefoo, was captured by pirates this morning somewhere in the vicinity of the mouth of the Yellow River.

She is now proceeding to Chefoo, with a dramatic and tragic tale of the piracy to be told on her arrival.

It is learned that one European aboard was wounded in the fight with the pirates and that six others were taken ashore, among whom was Mr. Nicholl, the Shanghai manager of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company.

British Officers.

There are two British naval officers among the captives, it is learned. They are Lieutenants Field and Luce.

A Japanese passenger named Yamamoto, Second Officer Brand and Third Engineer Watson were also in the hands of the raiders.

A man named Ross is the only one seriously injured. Approximately 20 Chinese are also held captive.

The remainder of the passengers, the ship reports, are unhurt.

The Shuntien is due at Chefoo early to-morrow morning.

Warships on Way.

Later. The American destroyer Pope and the U.S. Navy tender Bittern left Chefoo at 9 p.m. for the scene of the piracy.

The British destroyers Witch and Veteran are also proceeding to the scene from Wei-hai-wei.

Later. The two captured naval officers are thought to be Lieut. J. D. Luce, of H.M.S. Osiris, and Lieut. P. L. Field, of H.M.S. Oswald, both submarines on the China Station. The Shuntien was built at the Taikoo Dockyard and was com-

MIL. HORACE LO. TO GIVE UP PRACTICE

After practising as a solicitor in Hongkong for nearly eight years, Mr. Horace Lo, brother of Messrs. M. K. and M. W. Lo, and a partner of the well-known legal firm of Messrs. Lo and Lo, has decided to give up law.

He will be leaving Messrs. Lo and Lo at the end of the month to throw in his lot with the Mercantile Bank of India, by whom he has been appointed Chinese Manager.

Mr. Lo has had a wide practice since his admission to the local Bar in October, 1926, after passing his final examination. For the last few years, Mr. Lo has earned a reputation as a tennis player, having appeared regularly for the Chinese Recreation Club, and as a physical culturist.

He was educated at Queen's College, and whilst there he obtained the "Junior Morrison," "Ho Fook," and the "Senior Morrison" scholarships, the last named being, of course, the most coveted prize. He left Queen's College in 1918, when he matriculated, and went to the Hongkong University, where he studied in the Arts Faculty for two years.

He was articled to his brother, Mr. M. K. Lo, in November, 1921. He went to England in January, 1924, and whilst there he attended the office of Messrs. Lo and Lo's London agents, Messrs. Darley, Cumberland and Co., and went through a course of legal studies for two years, with the well-known firm of law conchors, Messrs. Gibson and Weldon.

missioned about three weeks ago. She was specially constructed for working the northern China ports for the China Navigation Company and left on her maiden voyage last month.

RUSSIA'S FEAR

GERMAN-JAPANESE ALLIANCE

London, June 18. A high authority who has recently returned from a prolonged visit in Russia and Germany, interviewed to-day, said that the Soviet would be most interested in the outcome of possible Russo-German talks and in the conversation, just completed, between Signor Mussolini and Herr Hitler. But of the latter, the Russians are sceptical of real results, he said. Hitler, they consider, is no more than a cat's paw of the deeper forces at work in Germany.

Russia is convinced that there is a private understanding between Germany and Japan and that they are planning upon a combined attack on Russia in the Spring of 1935, when Germany's resignation from the League of Nations takes effect, and her military preparations are completed. Germany, it is believed, aims to seize certain Baltic territories where she is spending money freely on propaganda. Particularly is she interested in the Ukraine, whose fertility would make her self-supporting.

Germany's next aim would be the conquest of France, and then England, whom she blames entirely for her defeat in the Great War.

This authority expressed the opinion that in Russia it was felt that Japan was less confident at the moment than she had been a few months ago concerning the prospects of a campaign against Russia. The revival of influence from the Japanese civilian element, the new influence of Mr. Shidehara's following at the Foreign Office, were hopeful signs for Russia.

The Soviet is now practically self-supporting, he said, so far as war materials were concerned, even to supplies of nickel, so vital in the manufacture of munitions. —Our Own Correspondent.

NAVAL AIRMEN IN HUNT FOR PIRACY VICTIMS

No Time For Monetary Discussion

London, June 18.
In reply to a question in the House of Commons to-day, the Prime Minister said he regretted that in view of the pressure of Parliamentary business he could hold out no hope of special time being given for a discussion of monetary policy.—British Wireless.

ROOM KEY QUESTIONS AT INQUEST

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF MR. GUERRA

PRESENTIMENT OF TRAGEDY

Questions concerning the key of Room 543 at the Peninsula Hotel featured this afternoon's hearing in the inquest concerning the death of Madame R. G. Alves-Guerra on May 29.

Mr. R. G. Alves-Guerra, the deceased woman's husband, was closely cross-examined by the Coroner and Inspector Lane when he resumed his evidence this afternoon.

The Coroner:—You told us yesterday that your wife once mentioned divorce, and that you didn't take her seriously. When was that?

Witness:—A few days before she committed suicide.

Witness added that his wife was excited and would say things of that sort in fits of depression.

Was she inclined to quarrel?—Yes, but I was always calm towards her, because I knew she was sick.

UPSET AT TIFFIN.

When did you last quarrel?—On the evening of May 28. I tried to calm her next morning, and when I left for the office she seemed to be composed. I met her at tiffin on May 29, and she smiled at me and was nice.

Did anything happen at tiffin?—Yes; all of a sudden she seemed upset and had tears in her eyes.

What upset her?—I don't know, and she wouldn't tell me. She was often like that.

Mr. Guerra added that when he left her on the morning of the shooting he was convinced that the misunderstanding he had had with her was over.

CAUSE OF QUARREL.

The Coroner:—What was the misunderstanding?—

Witness:—I told her not to go out too much in the afternoon. She was in the habit of going to Repulse Bay to swim every afternoon. I told her not to go too early, and to wait till about 5 p.m.

Do you know what she was doing during the morning?—I did not know then, but I learned afterwards that she went to Mr. Oh's office where she met some friends who were leaving Hongkong that afternoon.

Witness was then questioned about the key to Room 543, and was asked where it was when he left. "I was certain it was in the room," he said.

KEY IN OFFICE.

The Coroner:—Do you know that after Madame Guerra was removed to hospital your key was found in the hotel office, and can you explain it?

Witness:—No, I did not take the key to the office.

Inspector Lane:—On your way up to the room, did you go to the office and get your key?

Witness:—No.

The Coroner:—Why not?

Witness:—Because I thought my wife was there.

The Coroner:—But you rang your wife up half an hour before and she was not in then?

Witness:—I had a presentiment

H.M.S. Eagle Rushed From Weihaiwei To Yellow River

GRAPHIC STORY OF OUTRAGE

FIVE BRITISH WOMEN ON SHUNTIAN

LOCK THEMSELVES IN CABINS

CHEFOO, JUNE 19.
AN INTENSIVE AIR SEARCH BY BRITISH NAVAL PILOTS FOR THE FOREIGN VICTIMS OF THE SHUNTIAN PIRATES IS APPARENTLY PROPOSED AS H.M.S. EAGLE, THE AIRCRAFT-CARRIER HAS LEFT FOR THE MOUTH OF THE YELLOW RIVER, THE SCENE OF THE GANG'S DEPARTURE.

H.M.S. Eagle was accompanied, when she left Weihaiwei, by two destroyers and a Customs revenue cruiser, to aid in the quest for trace of the junks with the prisoners.

With the assistance of the American naval authorities at Chefoo, Mr. J. B. Ross, the wounded third officer, was landed this morning from H.M.S. Witch. He is suffering from severe gunshot wounds, but his condition is "reasonably and satisfactorily safe."

A thrilling story of the outrage was detailed to Reuter by the master of the Shuntien on her arrival in Chefoo, with the Witch and Veteran which picked her up at 1.10 a.m.

MR. ROSS SHOT IN GOING TO AID OF MASTER

The Shuntien, escorted by H.M.S. Witch, came into Chefoo at five o'clock this morning. Captain Christensen, in an interview with Reuter's correspondent, said that the pirates sprung their surprise on the ship at 11.30 p.m. on Sunday.

Approximately thirty armed pirates took part in the attack, and they quickly took charge of the ship.

The procedure was rather unusual.

CAPTAIN HELD UP.

Several pirates first visited the wireless room, held up the two operators and imprisoned them in the smoke-room.

The captain heard the disturbance and left his cabin and was immediately held up by three armed pirates and also escorted to the smoke-room.

The third officer, Mr. J. B. Ross, who was on watch, left the bridge that something was wrong and I went up straight to the room.

You felt that she was there?—Yes, I went straight to the room.

Sometimes when I rang her up from the office she would not answer the telephone even when she was in.

Inspector Lane:—Madame Guerra said sometimes that she was tired of life; did she make any attempt to commit suicide?

Witness:—No.

Did Madame Guerra take any drugs?—No, she smoked from 30 to 40 cigarettes a day, against my advice. She also drank French wines against my advice, but never took drugs.

CHLOROFORM PURCHASE.

Can you explain why there was a bottle of chloroform in the room?—No, I was told she bought chloroform, but I never saw it.

Who told you?—I don't remember. I was told a few days after her death.

Inspector Lane then produced the black attache case which witness said had contained the pistol. The Inspector said the case was not locked when the police found it, and contained a pair of dancing shoes belonging to Madame Guerra. Mr. Guerra was asked for the key, but could not produce it.

The inquiry is proceeding.

which had not at that stage been invaded by the gang, and not suspecting piracy, and went to the assistance of the skipper. He was ruthlessly shot down, badly wounded.

Almost simultaneously, the two other deck officers and two engineers were held up and imprisoned in the smoke room, where they all remained until five o'clock yesterday afternoon when the pirates left the ship.

PIRATE NAVIGATOR.

During the time that the pirates were aboard, the Shuntien was in the charge of the No. 3 pirate, who was evidently an experienced seaman and navigator. He steered the ship towards the mouth of the Yellow River, where five junks were seen lying to.

The Shuntien was brought alongside and the transfer of the loot and the prisoners began.

Captain Christensen says that he cannot be sure that the junks were in league with the pirates. If not, they were commandeered.

SHUNTIAN GROUNDED.

The Shuntien grounded on the soft bottom of the river mouth, but refloated with the tide soon after the pirates left.

The gang did not do any material damage to the ship. They did not even take the trouble to destroy the wireless apparatus, which was brought into operation shortly after the pirates had left, touch with the naval authorities at Weihaiwei being soon established.

No cargo was taken but the passengers were robbed of everything of any value, their baggage being strewn about the decks.

WEIRD ATTIRE.

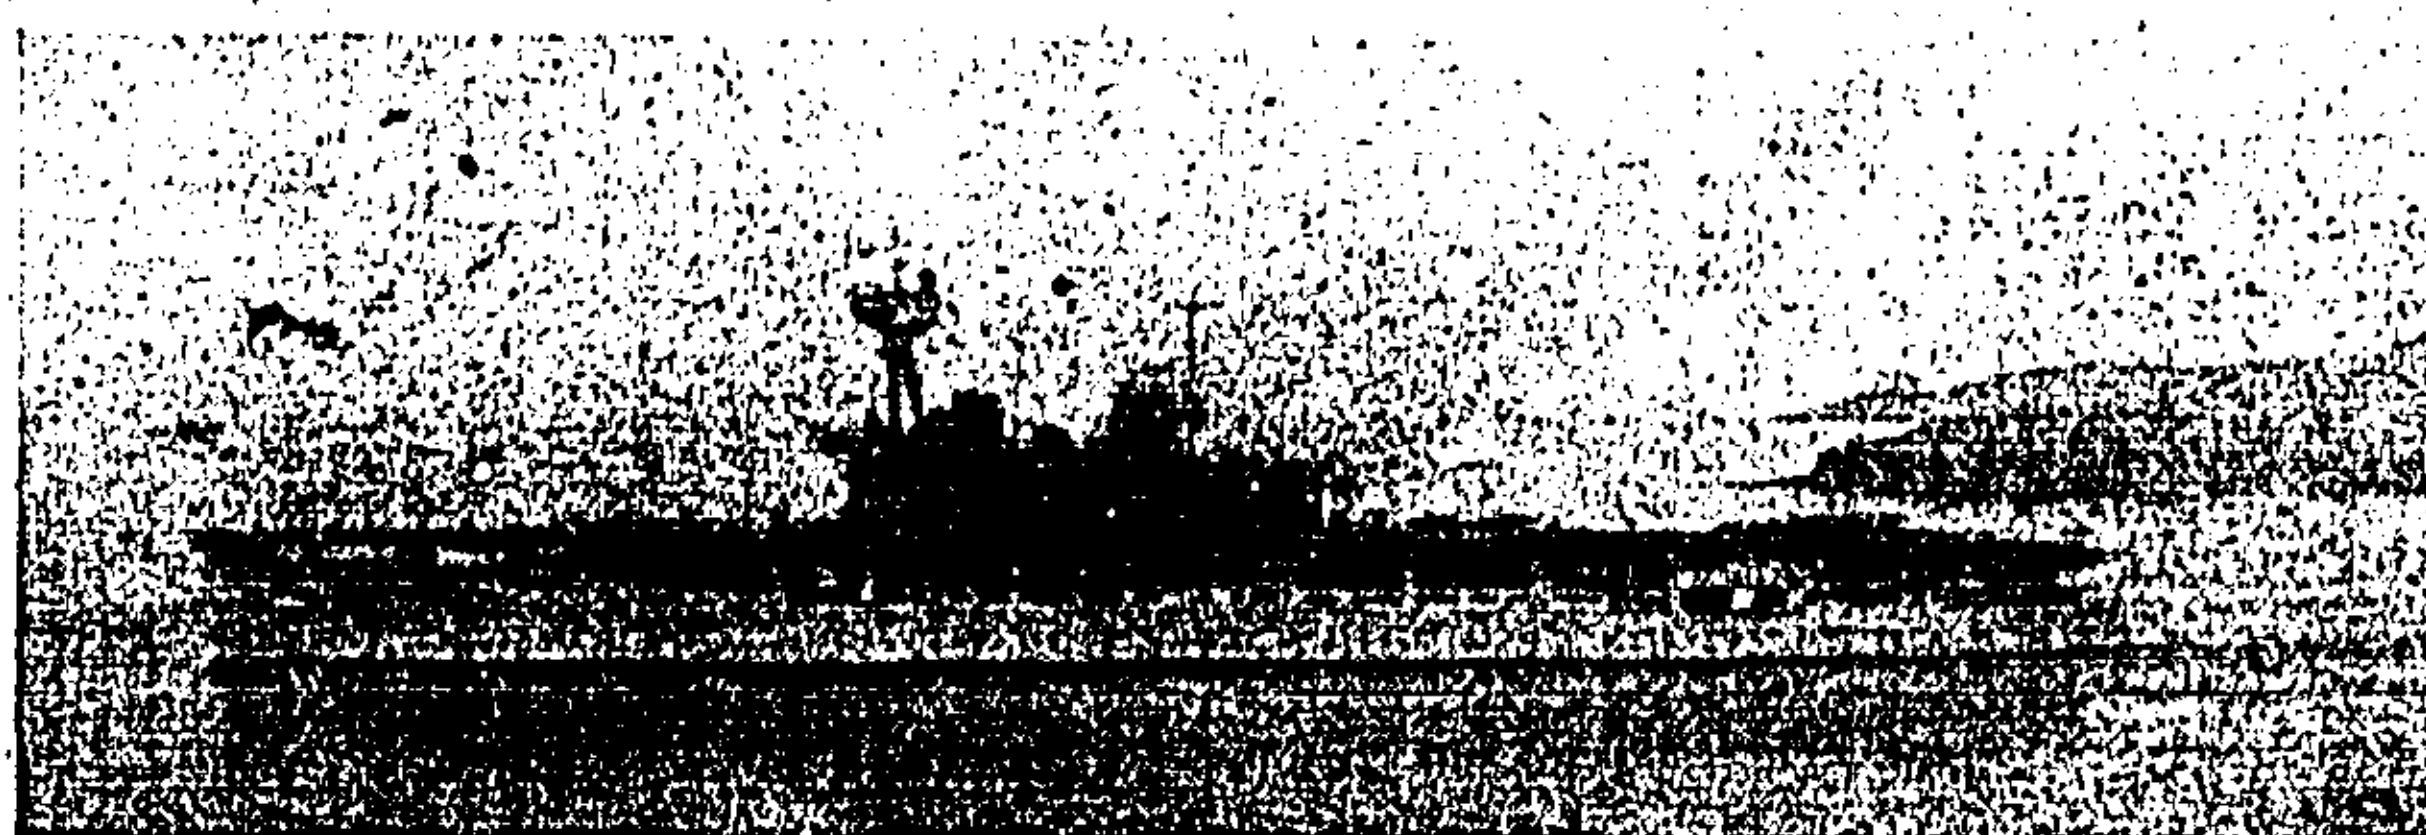

The pirates left their own ragged clothing on the decks, leaving the vessel dressed in the weirdest assortment of clothes, including dress suits, patent leather shoes.

They took spectacles, jewellery and money from the passengers.

They even robbed two small British children named Hutchison of the trinkets they were wearing.

According to a story related by one of the gang to the compradors, the pirates were Shantung smugglers.

HYPERION'S GREATEST TEST

ROYAL ASCOT'S OPENING

AN INTERNATIONAL CLASH

(Special to "Telegraph").

London, June 18.

The Royal Race Meeting which is opening to-morrow with the prospect of perfect weather promises to be the greatest Ascot Week since the war.

A record number of boxes have been sold and all the stands have been covered, though more as a protection against a blazing sun than because rain is considered probable.

The stands have been painted in magic colours to match the glorious floral decorations.

The four new square towers of the main building have been equipped with lifts to whisk the backers from their bookmaker to their boxes.

TITBIT OF MEETING.

The tit-bit of the meeting, the Ascot Gold Cup, promises one of the greatest races of all time, particularly as it has been invested with an international flavour by the clash of Lord Derby's Derby winner, Hyperion, with the crack American runner, Mrs. Whitney's Mate, the French Thor and the Italian Crapom.

HYPERION FAVOURITE.

All four are regarded as the champions of their countries. It is considered certain that Hyperion will prove capable of upholding British prestige, though his foreign opponents are undoubtedly formidable.

France may win the Hunt Cup with Rentmark, a son of the great sprinter, Epinard.—Reuter Special.

RIFT IN NAZI LUTE

PAPEN SPEECH BANNED BY GOEBBELS

RIGHT WING PROTEST

(Special to "Telegraph").

Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1921. Received June 19, 12.10 p.m.

Berlin, June 18.

The possibility of a showdown in Nazi circles is envisaged as a result of a clash between Dr. Goebbels and Captain Franz von Papen, who has been leaning more sharply towards the Right recently.

The first act of Dr. Goebbels, as Minister of Propaganda, on returning to Berlin from Warsaw, was to forbid the publication in the Nazi newspapers of the speech of his colleague, the Vice-Chancellor, Captain von Papen.

The first edition of the Frankfurter Zeitung was confiscated by Nazi storm-troops on instructions from Dr. Goebbels for printing the speech.

Captain von Papen had pleaded for a shattering of political pressure and had protested against the attacks of Nazi extremists on members of the Right Wing in the State.

He urged that criticism of party policy should not be construed as malevolence towards Hitlerism.—Reuter Special.

WEATHER FRAYS ON THE TEMPER

I Was Worried SICK

Thought Something Terrible Was Wrong With My Baby

Natural Way Doctors Advise. Makes Baby Hungry for Food. Restores Health Naturally.

No longer need you fear that something terrible is wrong when your child is fretful, listless or won't eat. Simply do this at once: Give your baby a little Castoria and see how quickly improvement comes. Authorities have found that intestinal absorption may be poisoning the system even when the child's habits may seem regular. The stomach is upset. Digestion is impaired. Nerves lose their delicate balance. Nothing corrects this distressing condition quite as naturally and safely as Castoria. Softly it cleanses the system, settles the stomach, improves digestion and restores nerve-poise. Then Nature does the rest as only Nature can. Appetite for food returns. Health is again normal. As a result baby gains weight fast. Now don't worry, mother. At the first warning that all is not well give your child a little Castoria. Results will surprise you.

Keep Colour Scheme in Mind in Making All-Year-Round Slip-Covers

TWO PATTERNS, ONE FOR DIVAN AND ONE FOR LARGE CHAIR, SUGGESTED

By Marian Young.

There are two schools of thought in regard to slip-covers. One maintains they are merely dust protectors, in which case inexpensive materials in natural-coloured linen or in awning-striped cotton is used to make them. The other holds that slip-covers are part of an interior decoration scheme and that really beautiful fabrics must go into them. These can be left on all winter. Certainly slip-covers are less expensive than re-upholstering every few years, and, since they can be washed or dry-cleaned, greater freshness and crispness is maintained in a room.

Whether you are getting slip-covers for year-around use or merely for the summer months, map out some concrete form of colour scheme before buying fabrics. If the living room is small, tiny floral patterns will be better than large ones. But if the rooms are large, you can go in for big and more intricate designs.

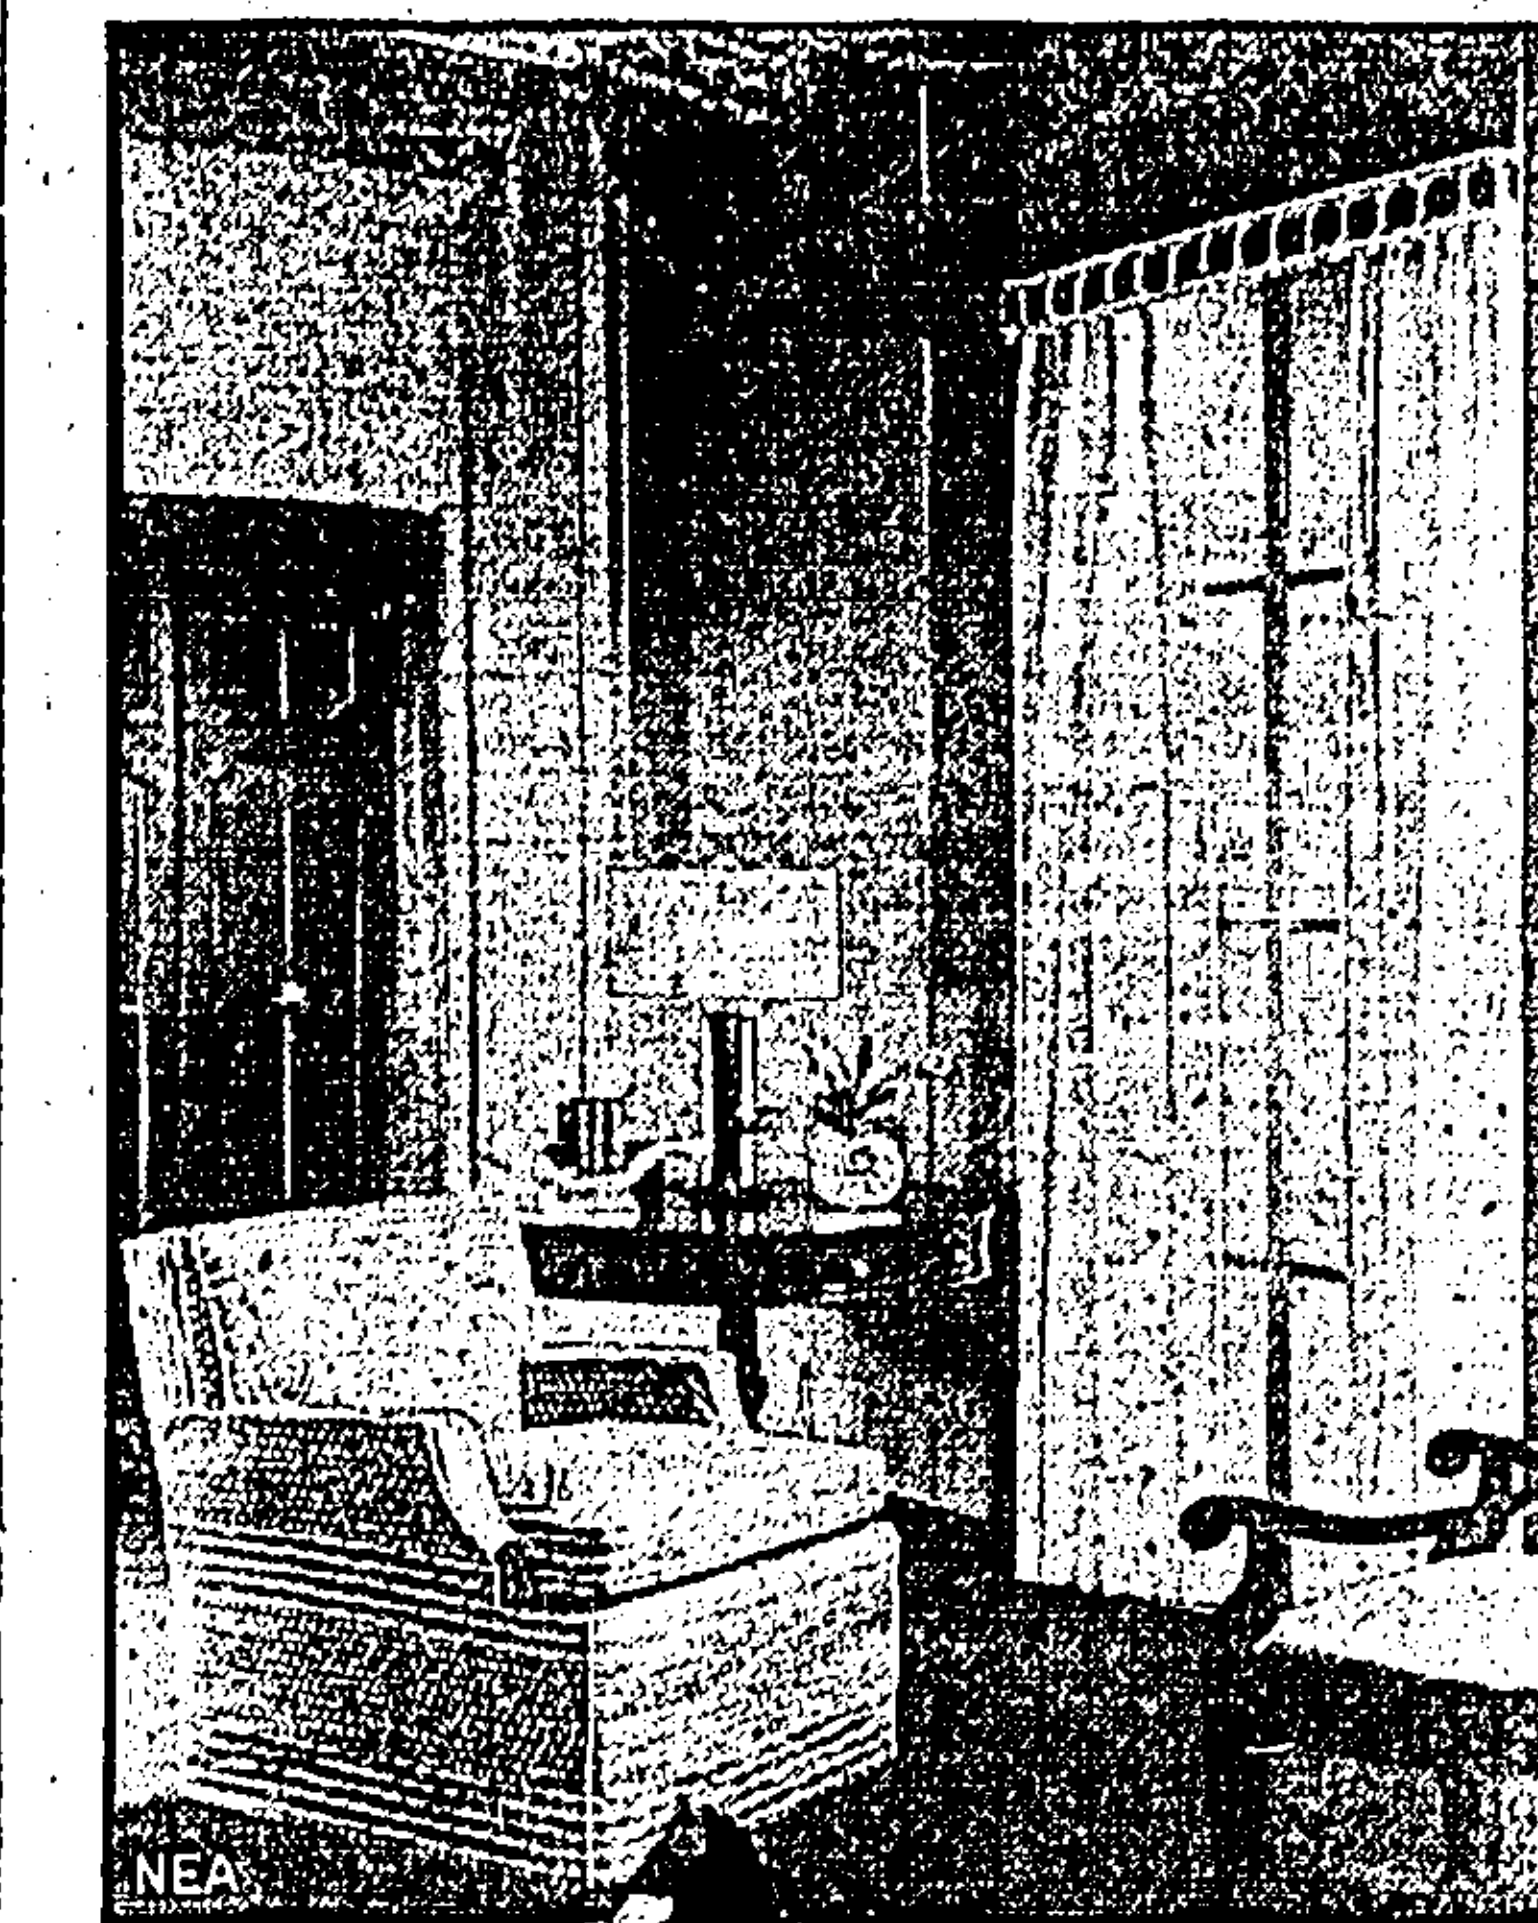

Effecting Variety

It's better to do the divan in a monotone material, one big chair in a print but with a background that harmonizes with the divan's slip-cover and all the other overstuffed chair in fabrics that blend with but do not match either the divan or each other. That way, you get more variety in a room, especially if you have summer draperies that match one of the chairs. Of course, if your slip-covers are merely dust-protectors in the town house while the family goes to a resort for the summer, no such amount of trouble is necessary. Any material in any colour will serve the purpose just as well.

Hand-blocked linen, novelty cottons, gazed chintz and cretonnes are popular slip-cover materials. Squares, checks and more intricate geometric figures vie with floral patterns. It's smart to cover some of your chairs with the modernistic checked-patterns and some of the other pieces with floral printed fabrics. Have the pillows on the divan covered with both designs.

Slip-covers can be made at home or, if you aren't handy with sewing machine and needle, department stores will make them to order for you. Just remember that really good fabrics are cheapest in the long run and so are slip-covers that are well-fitted and expertly made. If you're going to attempt the job yourself, it's best to get one divan pattern and one large chair pattern. They probably won't fit your own furniture, but the procedure is more simple if you have them to go by. (By the way, it takes between five and six yards of fabric to make a slip-cover for the averaged-sized over-stuffed chair.)

Take one end of the material and place it on the back of the chair. Pull it downward toward the bottom, pinning it tightly across top and bottom and down the sides. Baste between the pins to mark the lines where you are to cut and then cut out that section of material, allowing one inch all the way around for French seams. If you're using a definite pattern that runs up and down, consider it before you cut. Geometric figures must be cut straight across so as not to break the design of the fabric.

Allow for Seams

Now do the front side of the back of the chair, pinning smoothly, basting a line between the pins and finally cutting the materials. Do likewise with the seat and the inside and outside of the arms of the chair. Always allow for seams.

Sew the pieces together and finish with either plain French seams or rows of the new fringed braid which can be purchased by the yard. Leave an opening down one side of the back of the chair so that the cover is easily removable. The opening can be finished with snaps or with a slide fastener. The bottom of each slip-cover can be hemmed and left plain or finished with a box pleat all the way around. Slip-covers that touch the floor are more graceful-looking than those which end about four inches above it.

Chair cushions must be covered separately, and that goes for the cushions of the divan, too. If you intend to wash your new slip-covers, be sure to use pre-shrunk materials or else shrink them yourself before you cut them.

The Right Way to Shampoo

By Alicia Hart

How to make a liquid shampoo at home is a problem which seems to be worrying a lot of women these days. Well, it's no cause for worry because nothing could be easier.

Don't throw away the tiny pieces of castile soap which collect in the bathroom. Instead, put them in a glass jar and fill the jar with lukewarm water. Allow it to stand until the soap is dissolved. Then, when you're ready to shampoo, dilute the soap jelly with a little water and use the mixture to wash your hair. Using a liquid shampoo is a far better procedure than rubbing a cake of soap directly on the hair. It rinses out more easily and has no harsh, drying effects.

Always rinse the hair at least three times and then, if you use a lemon juice rinse, put the juice of two fresh lemons in the third rinsing water and then rinse again with clear water. Lemon rinses have a tendency to keep blonde hair light and shining and they're good for brunettes, too. Nothing cuts and removes soap curds quicker than lemon juice.

Dry your hair in the sunshine if you can. Rub it with a rough towel to remove excess water, lift up parts of the hair and massage the scalp with your finger tips until the hair is dry.

CHAPTER XXIX

It would be fun, Gypsy said to herself on the Tuesday following their reconciliation, to go down and surprise Tom at lunch-time. Somehow she never seemed to have time or spirit for these small honeymoon gaieties any more. She dressed in her best—the new gray suit, the postage stamp hat perched on her shining crop of curls. The spring wind blew chaff and papers in the streets. The sun sent slanting bright shafts of sunlight into the gray canyons. It was a perfect day for an adventure.

She went up in the bronze elevator, smiling secretly at her own daring. The girl at the information desk was new and did not recognize her. She didn't give her name. Was Mr. Weaver in? The girl, who had the head and shoulders of a wax mannequin, spoke softly into a telephone and informed her that Mr. Weaver was just on his way out to lunch. What name?

"I'll wait here," Gypsy sat in the deep divan which swallowed up her smallness. In the dim light her gray costume was scarcely noticeable against the taupe background. Presently she heard Tom's step and almost started to her feet. But as he emerged from the corridor she saw he was not alone. A tall, gilt-haired girl was with him. He had her arm and was speaking to her earnestly. They seemed utterly absorbed. They did not see her as they stood waiting for the down elevator.

Gypsy's heart felt as though an icy hand were squeezing it. She sat perfectly still as the elevator door clanged open and shut and Tom's laugh rang out as the car shot downward. The information clerk glanced up curiously as she rose to go.

"Why, Mr. Weaver left just now. Didn't you see him?"

"No—I—I," she stammered.

"I'll be back later."

"Anything I can do?" The wax mannequin was helpful.

Gypsy's eyes wandered past her. Anything she could do? No, there was nothing anyone could do for her to-day. She had trusted him so completely, so utterly;

and yet she must believe the evidence of her eyes. How absorbed he had been! She had been right—she had been right all the time! She walked aimlessly down Broadway. Past Trinity churchyard with doves wheeling in the sunshine, past block after block of stone facades and plate glass and table d'hôte restaurants and haberdasheries.

A hooded subway entrance at Park Place reminded her that she must be home before it was time for Elsa to leave. She ran down the stairs and clicked past the turnstile, paying her fare. There was the baby to be thought of. If all else failed, if her world crumbled to dust around her there was always David, small and pink and trusting and fond.

She never knew, later, how she got through the dreadful day. Her throat would be dry, her heart would beat thickly and painfully when she thought of her husband's homecoming. What would she say to him? How begin?

Elsa put on her gray coat and big, soft, shapeless hat and went away. Gypsy bundled the baby up and carried him down to the perambulator garage in the basement of the building and trundled him out into the sunny street. The day had turned warmer. All along the pavements balls were tossed and small girls jumped rope. In a dark, narrow, stone-paved schoolyard some boys played marbles. Bedding tumbled out of second storey windows in a block of run-down tenements and Gypsy set her teeth, pushing David's carriage along this particular sidewalk. To-day she hated it all—city smells, rich, pulsating life. On other days it amused and interested her, gave her a vivid sense of things happening. To-day it irritated her beyond measure.

When she let herself into the apartment at 5 o'clock the telephone was ringing shrilly. She laid David carefully down upon the bed—he was peacefully asleep—and hurried to answer it. Tom's voice said, "Look, dear, is it Elsa's night in?"

"No. Why?" She thought, so we're talking commonplaces while he's deceiving me and my heart's breaking.

"Oh, good gosh, I asked Gipsy to dinner before I thought. I'm sorry, darling. What shall I do now?"

"You mean Hunt?"

"Yes. Met him outside the Central Hanover an hour ago and it seemed a good idea at the time. I've been trying to get you . . ."

This was reprieve, Gypsy thought, both for him and for her. She steeled her voice. "Oh, Hunt can take pot luck," she told him. "Let him come along."

"That's a good girl. That's a darling."

Gypsy put the phone down with unnecessary vigour. So she was a good girl and a darling, was she? Well, she'd show him!

It was one of David's good nights and that was a bit of luck. Gypsy was permitted to serve dinner without a single interruption. "I don't need any help," she had told Tom with cool finality when he followed her into the kitchen.

"Listen, darling, don't be mad. Honestly, I'm terribly sorry." Tom was frankly puzzled. She had been her old, laughing, delightful self these past few days. Now she had disappeared into her shell again; was cool, distant, removed from him.

"It's quite all right." Her politeness was the variety reserved for the perfect stranger.

She had the table set with her prettiest lace and linen cloth, her best china. Her red dress was demurely cut, leaving her rounded arms and throat bare. She had never looked prettier. There was an apricot flush on her cheeks and her eyes burned bright.

"Sweetheart . . . But she eluded Tom's arms.

"I'm busy," she said aloofly. "Will you see if the baby's all right? I thought I heard him stirring."

"O. K." Tom wore a faintly puzzled look. Gypsy had never been in this particular mood before.

The little dinner was a complete success so far as the guest was concerned, at least. The soup was a canned green turtle variety with sherry. Gypsy had bought it months before in a moment of unwonted extravagance and had been reserving it ever since for a special occasion.

It lent a touch of elegance to the meal, a simple affair of breaded pork chops and sweet potatoes and string beans.

Tom, who knew how his wife had been treasuring the green turtle soup, lifted his brows in mild surprise as that course appeared. But Gypsy chose to ignore his faint marital signals. Two months ago they would have exchanged glances of delighted recognition. To-night she ignored all his overtures.

Under her surface gaiety her thoughts beat a ceaseless tattoo. Hunt frankly envied their domesticity and said so, and Gypsy smiled brilliantly and said nothing. If he only knew!

It was almost twelve when he rose to go, with apologies for having stayed so late. He held Gypsy's hand for a fraction of a moment longer than courtesy demanded. Admiration shone from his eyes.

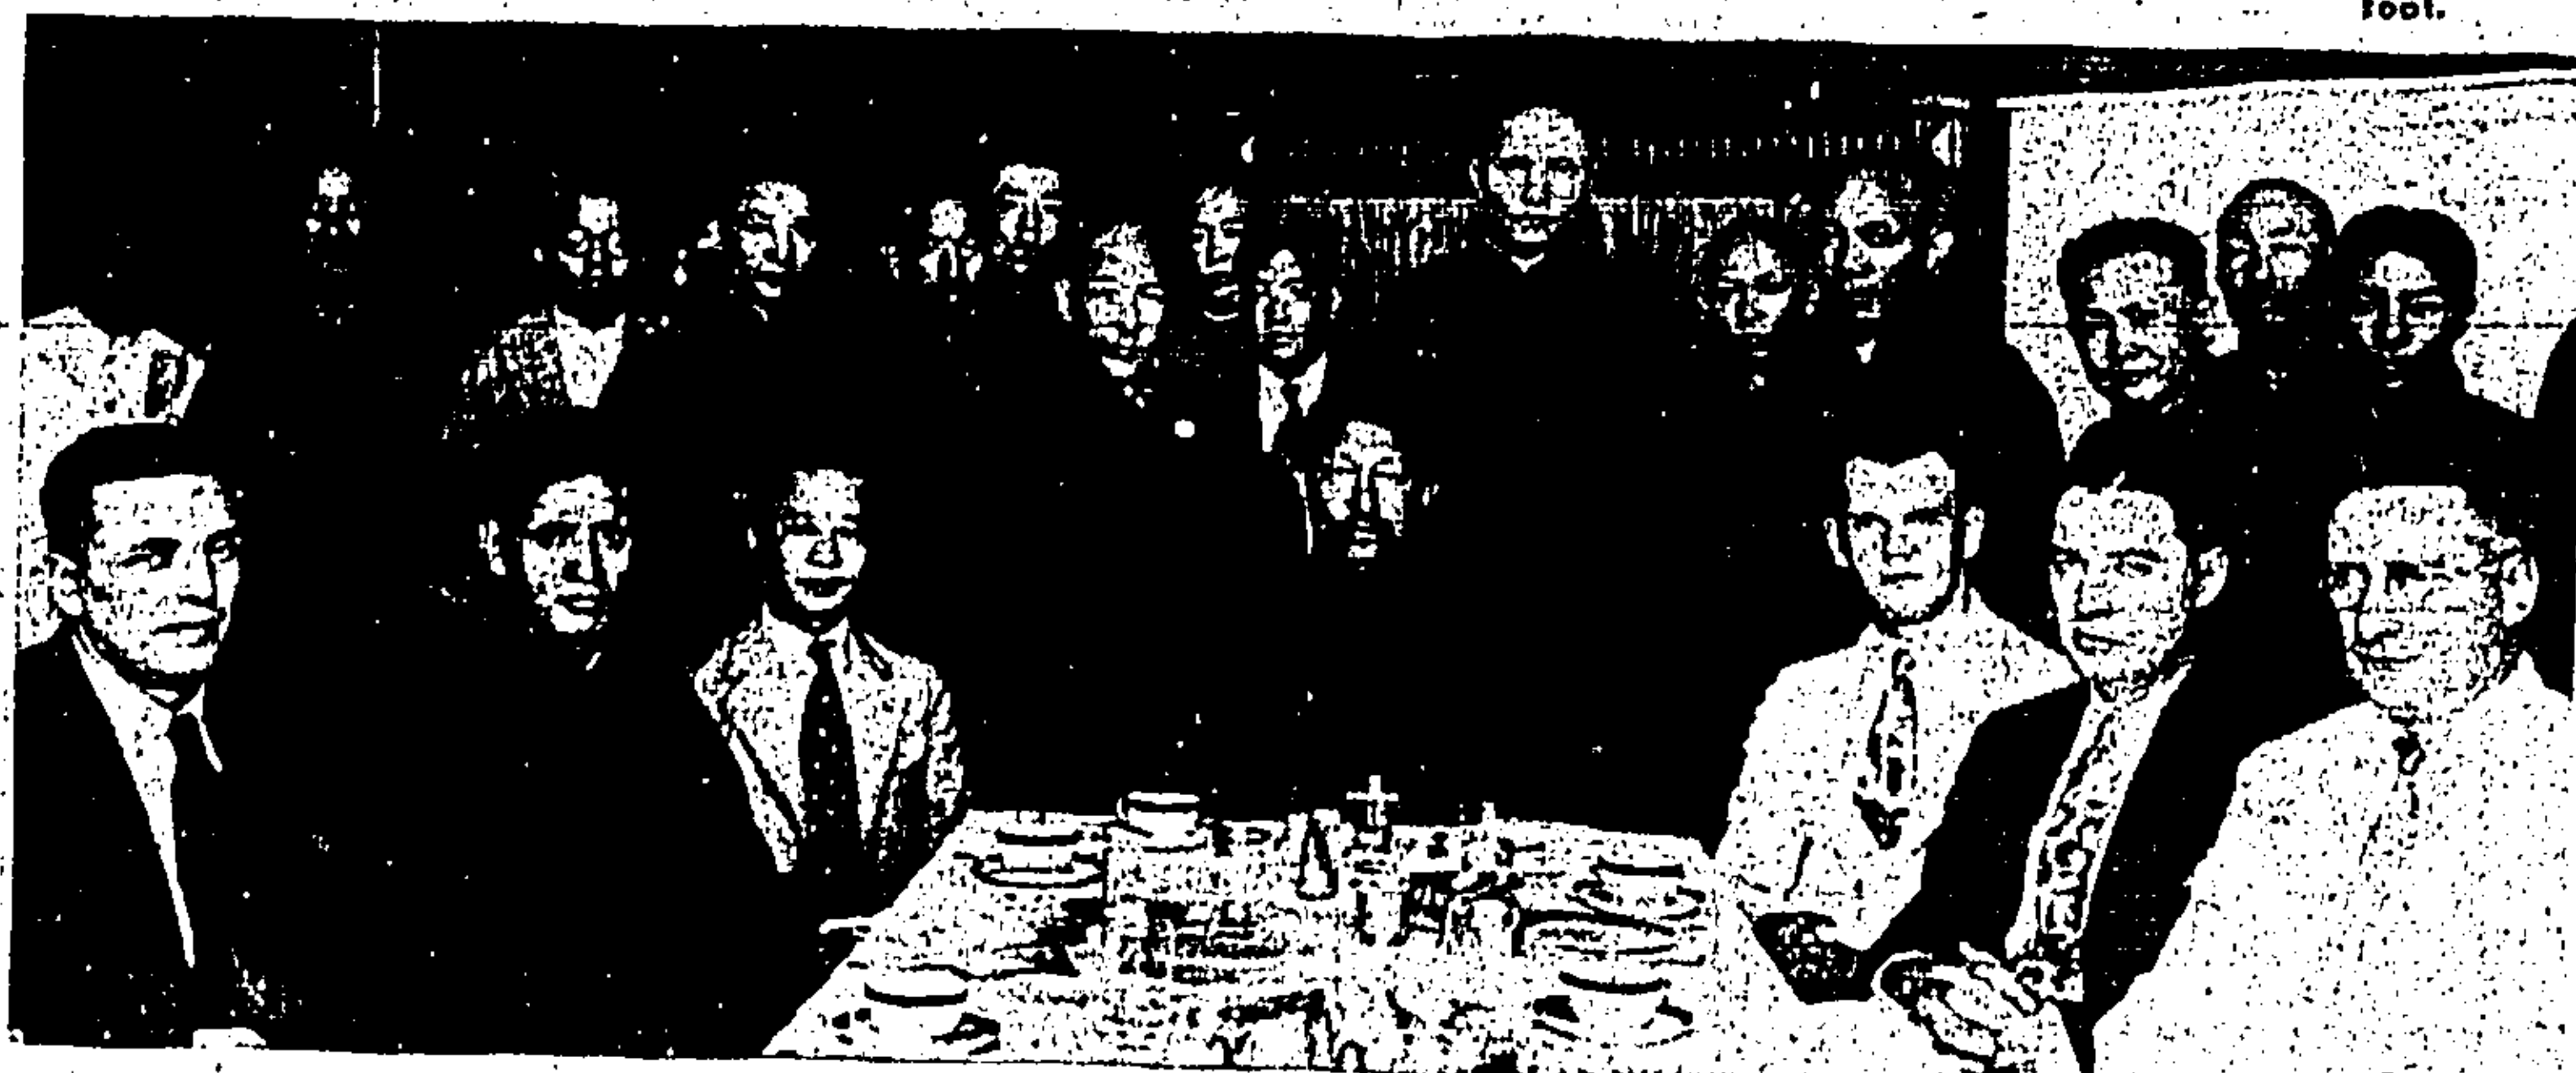

"It's been great," he told her. "Will you both come and dine with me some night and see a play?"

"We'd love to." She felt a surge of genuine liking for him. He was simple, direct and honest. You felt he'd never let you down . . .

Let down . . . let down . . . as Tom was doing. When he returned from seeing Hunt to the elevator Gypsy was already at the dishes. He came out into the kitchen and took her by the shoulders.

Among the many receptions and gatherings given in honour of the Panchen Lama who is now visiting Shanghai, was a tiffin party after the screening of the M.G.M. production, "Hell Below," at the Grand Theatre. On this occasion the United Theatres Inc. were the hosts. In the above group are sitting left to right, Messrs. R. K. Butler, the secretary to Panchen Lama, H. T. Tsung, the Panchen Lama, H. Sonnenlinder, S. B. Dunlap, and A. W. Peters.

Religious colours, gorgeous decorative effects and quaint and picturesque garbs were features of a huge parade in Shanghai in celebration of the festival of the Goddess of Mercy last week. The top left and the bottom right pictures show some of the sights of self torture—boys and girls with baskets of flowers suspended from the flesh of their forearms by means of hooks. Children carried on gaily decorated thrones are seen on the top right and on the bottom left figures representing old Chinese dramatic art.

The only survivor of the recent terrible mine disaster near Sarajevo, in which 128 miners were buried alive.

The famous Corsican bandit, Spada, in the hands of French gendarmes. He is being taken to Marseilles for a mental examination. He seemed now to have been afflicted with religious mania.

WILL YOUTH RID
WORLD OF POVERTY?

left. Thus a continuous stream of necessities would be kept flowing over the entire population, banishing poverty and the fear to poverty, involuntary unemployment and insecurity.

Meanwhile the graduates from the service would pass into a society constituted precisely as is our present competitive, individualistic, capitalistic order, and here they would be free to pursue profit, fame, honour, art, fortune or any other object that attracts them. Thus society would embrace two spheres—a sphere of youth where, in all able-bodied young persons would pursue, first, education, and, second, a livelihood, and having attained both of these aims would find themselves set free to seek, under conditions of leisure and independence, the aims, material or spiritual, which lay nearest to their hearts.

INDIVIDUAL SELF-DEVELOPMENT.

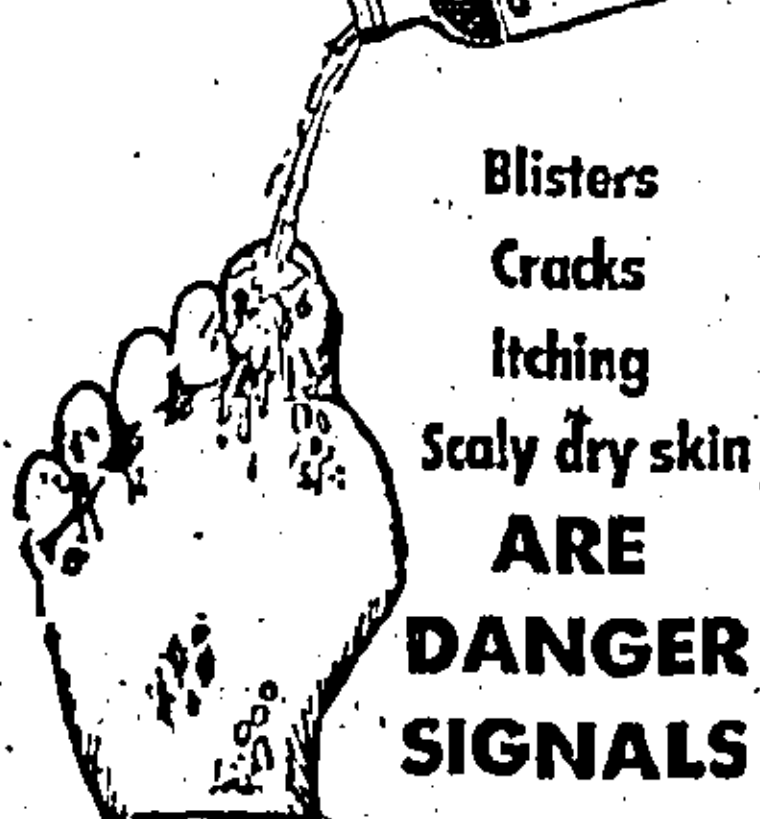

The endless quarrel between socialism and individualism would then be resolved, for while the period of youth, under the impelling drive of education and a livelihood, would be conducted under a socialistic idea of concerted action, the latter years, after 26 years of age, would be passed under a regime of complete, competitive liberty.

Among other privileges would occur that of accumulating wealth in any amount. The writer believes that the socialist's rancour against capitalism is uncalled for if capitalism shall be restricted to the traffic in luxuries and surpluses only, and if the necessities of life shall be secured to everyone by concerted effort. Capitalism could continue but its fangs would be drawn. It would then function harmlessly and even beneficently as an incentive to effort and provide a wide, free field of individual self-development.

The money question, which at present appears to be insoluble, would also then fall into order under the touch of reason. In the youth sphere of national service—called in this book for convenience "the Commons"—no money whatever would be used since no products or services would be bought or sold. Money would thus be wiped out altogether in that region where it is doing most harm.

In the opinion of the writer, poverty can never be abolished so long as the necessities whereby men live are bought and sold. To do so is only one step removed from the traffic in human life itself—a practice which our moral sense has already outgrown. We need but to pass on another step to see that a new emancipation proclamation is needed, one that shall free the population from the tyranny of markets, money and somebody else's "purchasing power," and shall secure to it not only its life, but its means of living.

The plan promises a deterrent effect upon crime. A large percentage of our crime, since much of it is being committed by young men under 25 years of age, would be inhibited by the fact that no youths of that age would be unemployed, idle, aimless, and often desperate, but all would be constantly and usefully employed under strict discipline in the honourable service of their country.

THE FREE PORT ISSUE

The controversy on the question of the retention of the Colony's free port status has been taken a stage further in the response made by Mr. F. A. Joseph and Mr. S. H. Dodwell to Sir William Shenton's invitation for a general discussion on the subject. Up to the present, however, it has not been made quite clear whether the advocates of a change in the existing system base their plea primarily on the desirability of protecting local industries from foreign competition, or on the idea of free trade between the various units of the Empire. If the former, it would appear that nothing short of high tariffs would be of real value, and even Mr. Dodwell would prefer preservation of the free port status to action in this direction. On the issue of Imperial reciprocity, we at once encounter a difficulty which Mr. Dodwell is not slow to perceive—namely, the fact that the great bulk of this Colony's products, such as they are, are produced under conditions which would not be tolerated in the Mother Country or the Dominions. It is perfectly true, as Mr. Dodwell points out, that factory regulations in Hongkong are much more rigorous than in most other parts of the East. Our workers, too, compared with those of China Proper, may be described as being not too badly off. But the dominant fact is that the local wage standard is so low when compared with that of England and the Dominions that there is a natural disposition on their part to protect their markets from the competitive effects of our lowly-paid labour. This very circumstance would appear to rule out the possibility of any plan of Imperial reciprocity. One other point remains, namely, the question of inducing China to grant preferential treatment to Hongkong. Neither Mr. Dodwell nor Mr. Joseph are under any delusions on this issue—the former hazards the shrewd guess that China might want as a quid pro quo something very much more than retention of our free port status, whilst Mr. Joseph pertinently raises the most-favoured-nation question. Up to the present, the only concrete proposal put forward on the general issue is Mr. Joseph's idea of thorough investigation by a representative Economic Committee. For ourselves, whilst we have not yet encountered any compelling arguments appearing to justify the experiment of a departure from the Colony's traditional policy, we freely concede that the present is no time in which to persist in pet

NOTES OF THE DAY

HITLER HOMILY

Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini are still the sole repositories of what really transpired at Venice, but there is one thing that Herr Hitler has been unable to conceal, that his visit has improved neither his outlook nor his tone. Back in his own country, he seizes the first opportunity to about challenge; supposed to have impressed Duce as a dreamer, the Nazi leader no sooner crosses the German border than he blossoms forth afresh as the man of action. An interesting psychological study seems to be offered, perhaps furnishing an important clue to the Nazi destiny for the observer acute enough and capable of conducting the analysis. The immediate concern, however, is Hitler's message and here there is nothing encouraging. He seems plausible enough uncritically examined. In a nutshell, he demands universal adoption of the cult of narrow nationalism. Let Britain look after her own affairs, and the French after theirs, and leave the Nazis to run Germany exactly as they will. This is the crudest ideology even if it contains a kernel of commonsense.

WAVE OF FEAR

Value in the Hitler homily can only lie in causing governments to reflect upon their responsibilities. Undoubtedly, undue attention has been devoted to foreign affairs; the wave of fear has clouded the entire horizon; domestic cares have been, to a large extent, neglected. That there is a distinct relationship between this development and his own activities would either not occur to Herr Hitler or would not impress him. In any case, it is still arguable that if the nations as a whole concentrated for a while upon putting their own houses in order, the close of such a regime might reveal much less cause for anxiety in international affairs.

A MAD MIXTURE

That is as high as the Hitler case can be put. And it was hardly worth establishing. Essentially, the Nazi attitude programme is the negation of international cooperation and understanding and can be no more helpful to Germany than it is as advice to the rest of the world. Nations can no more confine themselves to their own borders to-day than can discover a sane outlook in recognition and acceptance of the fact, prepared as they are platonically, to admit it. Small wonder that thinkers spend most of their time speculating on how it will all end. Herr Hitler talks in the terms of the eighteenth century, and acts, in some special directions, as we may expect the world to act, almost generally, perhaps twenty years hence. Britain's idealists, America's futurists, and France's realists, all manage to talk fifty years hence and act diplomatically like the eighteenth century.

DEFEATISM IN THE CHURCH

The same trend of thought carries us along to Bishop Hall's remarkable sermon at the Cathedral on Sunday. It was remarkable in a score of ways—particularly the suggestion, admission or confession that the Sermon on the Mount does not work even in the individual life. In the midst of so much outspoken truth and so much that was helpful, it was astonishing to find this almost all-pervading attitude of defeatism. The does not work becomes to mean that it can't work. And if that is true, there disappears hope for the future. For one must disagree with Bishop Hall's main contention, that it is impossible for any group to act morally in relation to another group, and retain belief in a future for civilisation. Granted that national groupings offer an exceedingly unfertile soil, especially when within them even Churches lend themselves to the cultivation of national patriotism as a paramount virtue. But can the world state, upon which the Bishop all too lightly touched, be pictured without a constitution of interlocking groupings—world controls in a variety of fields—all conforming to a universal code of morality? Is not such a code one of the first essentials, furnishing the driving force to at least the majority of thinking men, before a world state can emerge? And is not the development of that code a grinding gradual, well-nigh heart-breaking task for the nuclei that see the way to-day? The Church must lead if it is not to be left out. At the moment, it appears to be overlooking a growing allegiance to the material conception of history.

theories in one direction or the other. The cold facts of the situation should be impartially examined, with a view to following the course shown to be in the best interests of the Colony as a whole.

WILL YOUTH RID WORLD OF POVERTY?

By PRESTONIA MANN MARTIN

FOR a number of years previous to working out the National Livelihood Plan outlined in my little book "Prohibiting Poverty," it had seemed to me that the chief evil in our social system was not, as the Socialists were always telling us, financial inequality under which some were rich and others poor, but the financial insecurity which menaced all classes, both rich and poor. Nobody was safe; nobody could be sure that his means, whether great or small, might not vanish overnight.

This fact was brought home to me in a painful manner when I was a young girl. My father, anxious to provide for the safety of his family, insured his life in a well-known company, and for nine years he set aside every month $100 to pay the premium. Some months it was hard to find the money, but he and my mother saved and sacrificed and always managed to squeeze out the required sum. At the end of the nine years the company failed and the nine years' savings vanished. My father turned thereafter to savings banks for safety. In the present depression they, too, and every other known means of obtaining financial security have failed.

I became convinced that all forms of money insurance were illusive and that the only real security for old age lies in some arrangement whereby—as in earlier times—the old who can no longer work shall be taken care of by the young who are fresh and strong.

How to establish a due claim on the part of the old upon the labours of the young as a national policy, without placing too heavy a burden upon the young, was the problem. A decent, honest day's work was all that could justly be required of a young person. The question was: Could the effects of that day's work be so multiplied by machinery as to suffice for nine or ten other persons beside the worker himself? I became convinced, and this view was corroborated by experts, that it could be done. Indeed, it is believed that by enlarging and multiplying our machinery our total output could be expanded to almost any desired extent.

The general financial insecurity permeating our society is bound to have an extremely demoralising effect upon our people. Old standards of business honesty began to give way under the pressure of a frantic desire to acquire money in order to safeguard one from poverty and the humiliating dependence upon family, friends, or charity—which all classes dread. This fear generated an unnatural greed for money. The feeling that it was easier to steal money than to work for it stimulated the crime impulse.

The tragedy of our criminal record, especially among young men, may take its origin in the thought that haunts them: "Why slave all one's life to save up a little, only to have it swept away at any time?" This thought led also to undue extravagance and reckless expenditures, often for vice. "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow the banks may fail and wipe out our savings."

LIVELIHOOD PLAN.

Worst of all, this general insecurity of fortune leads to a condition in which the vast majority of the people must toil unceasingly all their lives, driven by the need to live coupled with fear of the wolf of poverty always waiting at the door. Under such a system the conditions of peace and leisure which are essential for the full ripening of spiritual qualities are not generally attained and millions of people, worn out, without ever having possessed the chance to bring to fruition the talents which lay deep within their natures. In their quiet, serene moments, many feel stirring within them hidden powers and possibilities, but they are saddened by the knowledge that these never can be developed.

The National Livelihood Plan would seek to free mankind forever from this bondage. It would provide that a national livelihood in basic necessities should be furnished to the whole nation by the efforts of the nation's young people between the ages of 18 and 26, as a continuation of their public school education. Upon the completion of their service they would pass into free competitive society, where, however, they would be provided during all of their lives with an adequate living furnished by the labours of the fresh relays of young recruits always coming up from the schools and taking their places in the ranks.

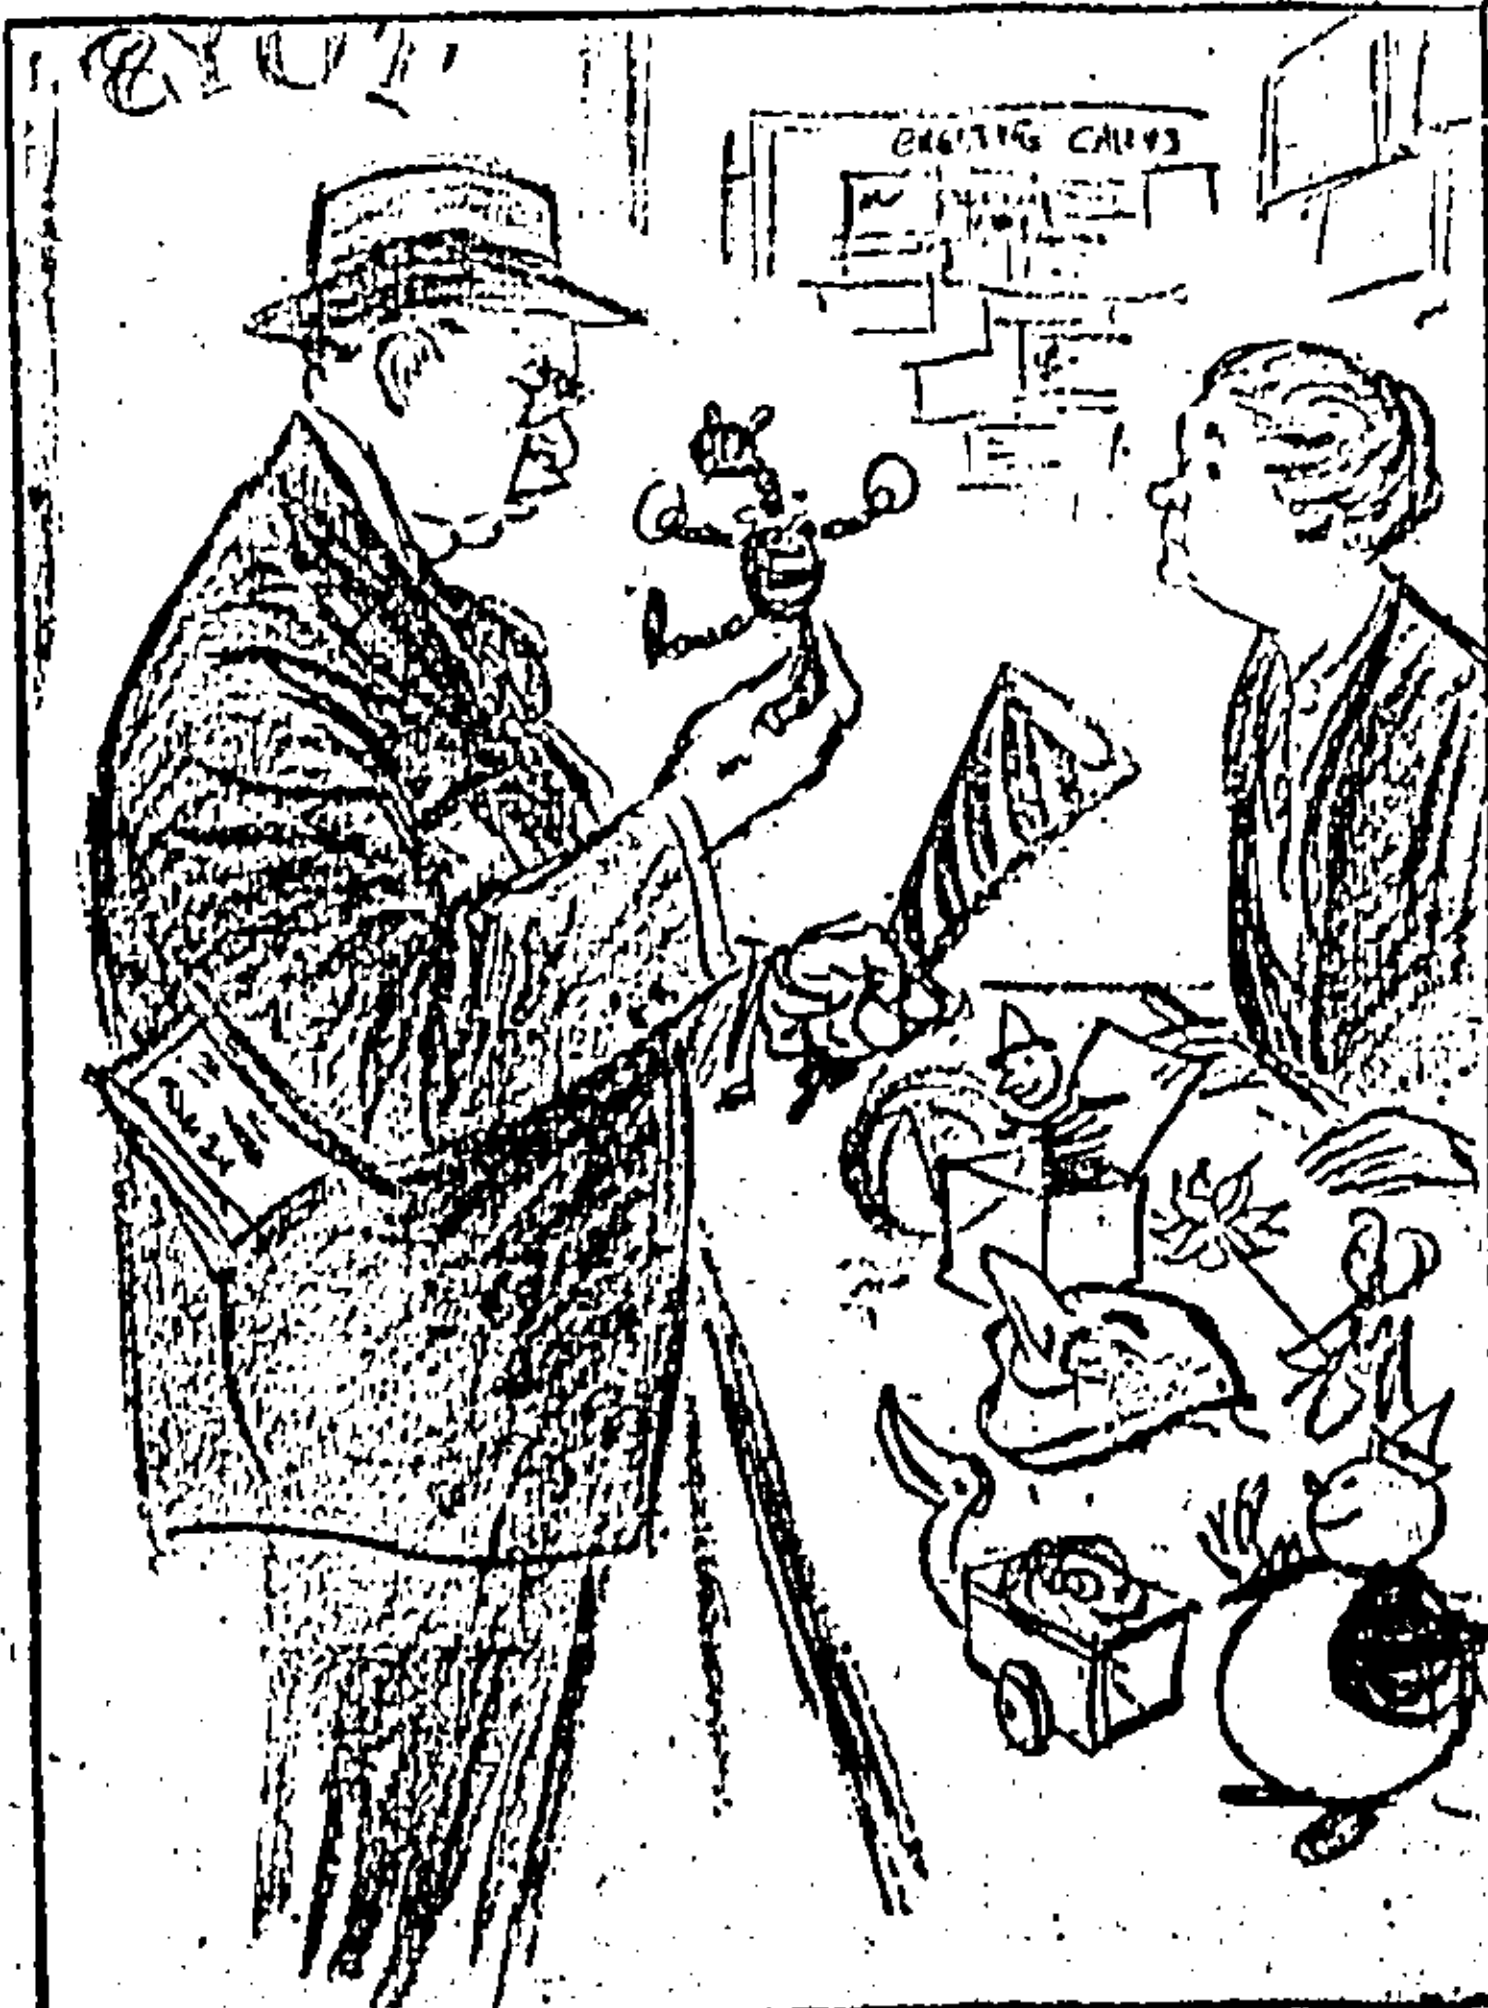

This plan sounds simple enough; the social consequences flowing from it, however, are enormous. Poverty would be banished forever—and the fear of poverty. Unemployment, as we know it, and the fear of it, would be gone. Crime could not fail to be diminished when all of the young men, at their most restless and dangerous age, were kept strictly and usefully at work, and when their task is accomplished would find themselves safely provided with a livelihood for life and therefore free of much of the incitement to crime.

Best of all, perhaps, men would then return to the normal human practice of living by working (their own work) and not as now, by selling. Independence would then return. A man's well-being, and his very existence, would then depend not upon markets and customers, foreign trade and employers, upon banks or upon somebody else's "purchasing power"—but upon his own efforts properly directed and scientifically organised to further not only his but also his country's safety and welfare.

The plan itself is very simple. All boys and girls, when they leave high school at 13, would be put to work in a national industrial army for eight years, using machinery and organisation to the utmost perfection. The stupendous productive power of modern machinery, if run at full capacity—which cannot be done at present—would enable these young workers not only to supply all of their own basic needs, but would furnish the entire nation with a livelihood in such fundamental necessities as food, clothing, shelter, transportation and protection.

Their service completed, the young people would leave the national organisation and disperse to their homes, where they would be provided for the remainder of their lives with all the necessities of life to be furnished by the labours of the fresh recruits coming up from the schools and taking their places in the ranks they have

JEEJEEBHOY sighed.

He was within a few hundred yards of meeting Madge and already his hawk-like eye (we forgot to say that Jeejeebhoy carried a marble where his other optic should have been, the transformation having been effected by an accident with a toothpick whilst Jeejeebhoy was at a school party) and already his hawk-like eye (owing to the extra work imposed on it, the remaining eye had become so keen that we feel justified in using the appellation hawk-like) and already his hawk-like eye was roving the seashore looking for a place where he might berth his craft.

Jeejeebhoy sighed.

As he did so his hawk-like eye suddenly alighted on two Chinese who were swimming behind the junk.

Encased in life buoys they were rapidly overhauling the junk, using the dog paddle stroke with their hands and walking on the bottom with their feet. In their teeth they held knives, revolvers, chop-pers, and machine guns whilst the one furthest away was also chewing his moustache.

Holding up his handkerchief to the wind Jeejeebhoy found he was able to add a couple of knots to his speed.

Not to be outdone the Chinese also took out their handkerchiefs and tied knots in them.

They were only a few yards behind when Jeejeebhoy conceived his idea.

Picking up a sock (you will remember that he had pilfered the Steam Laundry's junk) he threw it straight at his leading pursuer. The sock coiled once round his mouth and lay still.

The unfortunate man sank as if struck by a stone.

Two bubbles and a cockroach showed his grave as Jeejeebhoy took off his shoe and marked his thirteenth victim with a notch in his big toe nail.

With a faint gurgle of relief the junk slewed into bank; its engine kicked once in the stern and Jeejeebhoy was there!

(As we promised, Jeejeebhoy is now definitely on his way. Unless we have taken him round in a circle he should be on the same side of the Harbour as Madge by now. What will he do to her when he finds her hair done up in meat skewers? Will he ask her? Questions like this can wait but they won't explain why Jeejeebhoy didn't throw the second sock. What we said about there not being another sock like that in the Colony was all blarney. The laugh is on Jeejeebhoy because he has thrown one of his own socks away! In to-morrow's thrilling instalment of this heart-aching drama we are finally going to bring together these two central figures of romance and passion. While we have been dealing with Jeejeebhoy, Madge has been sitting chop suey and now, overcome with dropsy and remorse, she lies half in and half off her bed waiting for succour. Will Roy be the saviour? And which half is on the bed? These and other disturbing matters will have to be gone into to-morrow unless we can get some contributor to write about dogs. Meanwhile we feel that we have punished Jeejeebhoy enough to take away his pursuers. We have already caused him to take away some too-nail. Besides we are clearing the stage for a little love-making and we don't want any interference. The amah is reading an old English edition of Chaucer's poems and can be kept out of the way.)

DIMINUTIVE CHINESE GIRL PLAYS LEAGUE TENNIS

MISS CHEUNG PEEPS OVER THE NET AT THE K.C.C. GIVES PROMISING DISPLAY FOR CHINESE RECREATION CLUB

HO KA-LAU'S SINGLES CAMPAIGN AGAINST ALL-COMERS

(By "Veritas").

The unusual sight of a little girl, whose height only allowed her to peep over the top of the net, volleying, backhand, and forehand driving against the Fincher brothers and Bertie Guest, was seen at the Kowloon Cricket Club yesterday, when the Chinese Recreation Club were the visitors in a Mixed Doubles league match.

Miss Cheung, partnering W. C. Hung, was the young lady in question, and although faced with every disadvantage associated with this type of tennis, she gave a most praiseworthy account of herself.

For one of such a tender age and diminutive figure, Miss Cheung has her ground strokes developed to an unusual degree of power and accuracy. She has already mastered the overhead service, and her self-assurance on the court is an attribute which a number of older and very much more experienced players might profitably be endowed with.

Miss Cheung has started in the right direction at the right age, and although her tennis cannot seriously be claimed to be up to the requirements of to-day's mixed doubles league standard, there should be a very pleasant and successful future for this young player.

C. R. C. DIFFICULTIES.

This year the Chinese Recreation Club are experiencing what almost every other club has at some time or another—a dearth of lady players. Robbed of the services of Mrs. Litton and Mrs. F. T. Lo, as well as deprived of the worthy assistance of the Lo brothers, the C.R.C. are struggling to find new combinations.

Of last season's championship team, only three players figured in yesterday's game, they being Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau, and Mrs. Chui Chun-chui. In addition to M.W. Lo and Mrs. Litton, the Chinese were without the help of Tsui Wai-pui, and Tam Yoc-fong, who deputised for the local champion could do very little right.

The only combination to offer any resistance to the K.C.C. were Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau. Even here it was more a case of Ho Ka-lau versus the Rest. With Ho Ka-lau dominating the middle of the court, Mrs. Ho had to play a very passive part and such tactics continually had their repercussions with both players driven out of position.

Ho Ka-lau's insistence on going up on everything was quickly set at naught by E.C. Fincher and Mrs. Wilson, the latter being clever enough with her drives to put the ball past Ho.

One felt that Ho Ka-lau could have shown a little more confidence in his partner without seriously jeopardising their chances of winning points.

CLEVER MRS. CHUI.

Quite the most outstanding lady on view was Mrs. Chui Chun-chui, who played especially well in the third set against Guest and Miss Griffiths. Very often the exchanges determined themselves into duels between Mrs. Chui and Guest, and when it is said that the former by no means came off the worst, the value of her display can easily be appreciated.

Her confidence restored after a somewhat upsetting initial set against Teddy Fincher and Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Chui took to the net with excellent results against E.C. Fincher and Mrs. Miller, and played a big part in the winning of the set.

Had Tam Yoc-fong revealed more stability, the pair might well have won a couple of sets. Tam was completely out of touch at the net, and only occasionally brought off a stop-volley winner.

K. C. C. PROSPECTS.

While Ho Ka-lau, who is fast becoming one of the Colony's most stylish players, played extremely well, but had too much to attempt to be able to accomplish a great deal successfully.

NO MATCHES TO-DAY.

In consequence of the heavy rain this morning and the stormy conditions, to-day's "A" Division league tennis has been cancelled, and this block of matches will follow after the completion of the scheduled programme.

The affected games are:
H.K.C.C. v C.R.C. (1)
S.R.C. v K.C.C.
I.R.C. v C.R.C. (3)
C.R.C. (2) v S.C.A.A.
C.C.C. v Recrelo

CLOSE CALL FOR JACKIE BROWN

Flyweight Title Holder Forced To A Draw

London, June 18. Jackie Brown, holder of the World's Flyweight championship, only just managed to retain his title at Manchester to-night, when he met Angelmann, the Frenchman, over a fifteen round fight with the title at stake.

The result was declared a draw, both boxers putting up a lively show, with Angelmann a very strong challenger.—Reuter.

REVERSE FOR NEW YORK YANKEES

Sustain Nose Out By Detroit

New York, June 18. Only three baseball results in the American League have been received at the time of going to press. The Yankees sustained a reverse, being routed out by Detroit, but Boston Red Sox were in aggressive mood against St. Louis and scores 14 runs. Tieje blanked out the Athletic on behalf of the Chicago White Sox.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.
	R	H	E
Chicago	5	7	2
Philadelphia	0	2	1
(Tieje pitched. Rain stopped play after five innings.)
St. Louis	9	13	0
Boston	14	17	1
Detroit	6	11	3
New York	5	9	0
(Gehrig and Grossett homered)

The match hardly provides a true perspective in judging the prospects of the K.C.C. against the United Services next week. But reflection on their first encounter three weeks ago encourages one to believe that the K.C.C. are capable of winning, providing E.C. Fincher and Mrs. Wilson win at least two sets. The balance, however, is with the U.S.R.C., who have not only a better all-round team, but are playing on their own courts.

Round By Round Description Of Baer-Carnera Fight

Former Champion Receives A Terrific Thrashing From Challenger

The following is a vivid round by round description of the Max Baer v. Carnera fight for the heavyweight championship of the world, which took place at Madison Square Gardens last Thursday.

ROUND ONE.

After a quick clinch Baer missed a left to the head. Carnera pumped three lefts to the mouth. Baer's right smash knocked Carnera down but the Ambulant Alp was up without a count. Baer came right back with a terrific attack and Carnera bounced up and down from the canvas three times. Under the terrific pounding the champion reeled from rope to rope. Baer's round.

ROUND TWO.

Baer, tearing in viciously for a kill, nailed Carnera with a right smash to the head. Both tumbled to the floor. Both crashed again as Baer landed a right high to the head. Carnera, fighting doggedly to his task, moved in and punched Baer. As Baer momentarily seemed punched out, Carnera quickly recovered and drove him to the ropes, clubbing him about the head in his first real offensive. It was Baer's round.

ROUND THREE.

Both opened the canto with a rush from the ropes like a pair of prehistoric cave-men and drove away into Carnera's corner, where again the giant was crushed under the fury of Baer's two-fisted smashes to the head. The referee separated the pair at the bell. It was Baer's round.

ROUND FOUR.

Baer waited in his corner as Primo, with a reckless show of stamina despite the punishment he had taken, marched into the attack. He tried to reach Baer with a long left as they circled in midring. Baer, sneering, backed to the ropes. Carnera, sticking doggedly to his task, moved in and ponderously under cover of a long left. Baer ducked and swept both fists deep into Carnera's body, but quickly moved away again. He seemed slow and thing as the champion kept ceaselessly after him, clubbing with lefts and landing once in every two tries. It was Carnera's round.

ROUND FIVE.

With no letup in the ferocity of the action, the champion staggered when Baer smashed another right to the side of the head. Like some strange monster fighting to its life Carnera hung on desperately to Baer. At the bell he wobbled lurching to his corner, his face a bloody mask and his lips twice their normal size. Baer's round.

ROUND SIX.

Baer came up slowly, danced across the ring and shuffled in the resin. In Carnera's corner he cut loose and buried his right deep in Carnera's body. Swinging both hands madly for the champion's face Max missed both left and right before he drilled a terrific left hook to the head and crossed a right to Carnera's jaw. He then himself ran into a two-fisted blast to the body which nearly swept him off his feet. Carnera pressed forward like a wrecked battleship and held desperately as Baer met him with another terrific right to the head. Carnera's legs were buckling and he could scarcely stand but he never stopped punching. Carnera was wild, though, and Baer rammed a right then a left into the Champion's huge body before crossing a right to the chin. The round was about even.

ROUND SEVEN.

Baer crouched before the champion looking for a right hand opening. A trickle of blood came from the left side of Baer's head. They swapped lefts and rights in a furious body exchange and both dropped back. Baer sneered disdainfully but Carnera in a business-like way pushed Max across the ring with a stream of lefts and roughed Baer on the ropes. Heifered Donovan warned Carnera for a right to the body but Carnera stuck doggedly to the task of hopping the challenger's head with lefts as Baer strutted and grinned and posed for his friends at the ringside. Carnera caught Baer on the rope and smashed both hands to the head forcing Baer to take him seriously. Carnera's round.

ROUND EIGHT.

Carnera seemed to have all his great strength back as he danced across the ring and stabbed Baer's face with a long left. Max took a few heavy thumps, Carnera drove a traffic left hook and right smash to the body, flinging a crashing overhead to Carnera's temple. The giant shook off the terrific bombardment but ran into another straight right to the side of the head that mashed the flesh under his left eye. Baer's right was low but he drove a terrific right back of Carnera's ear. The giant was wobbling again and a left hook brought a stream of blood from his nose. The champion, still face now a gargoyle's mask, weakly beckoned him to come in and Baer did. Carnera lunged to get away and fell flat in his own corner, rising without a count. Donovan called a low blow on Baer which cost Max the round.

ROUND NINE.

Carnera seemed much weaker, and Baer stalked in like a merciless panther, grunting and baring his teeth for the kill. Carnera's courage was not undermined. He crowded forward jabbing Baer off balance with his left. Baer dove in headlong, missed a long left but drove a long right to the body. Primo beckoned him to come in and fight. Baer again dove headlong and his right smashed into Carnera's chin as the left again swung low. Carnera did not complain and came back with two uppercuts which shot Max's head back, though the champlion's legs were floundering under him. Baer landed left hook to the body and a right which glanced off the champion's shoulder. Carnera's round by a shade.

ROUND TEN.

Baer came out with an exaggerated crouch. Carnera reached him with an open left glove and Donovan ordered him to close his hand. They clinched. Carnera, appearing strong again, hammered Max's body with both hands, then Baer turned the champion around and smashed a dozen furious lefts and rights to the ribs. Carnera walked out of the corner and motioned to Baer could do no damage there, so Baer flung a long right to the head, missing. Carnera grabbed and hugged him, then pounded both hands to the head. As they came out of the clinch, two rights floored Carnera. He came up reeling. Baer smashed Carnera down to the floor again for a count of three. As the bell rang the crowd was in an uproar, with the champion against the ropes. Donovan tried to stop the fight but Carnera waved him away. It was Baer's round.

ROUND ELEVEN.

Baer was cautious as Carnera stumbled. He terrifiedly beaten him out of his corner. A long right to the chin floored the champion, but he came up without a count. Baer smashed about the head, but dead game, the champion flung his hands aimlessly at the challenger, and even whipped the mid-air. Carnera's legs were scarcely holding him but he managed to throw a long right to the head before Baer dropped him with a long left to the chin. As the champion came up Donovan stopped the fight giving Baer the world's championship on a technical knockout, two minutes and sixteen seconds after the round opened.

THE FUTURE OF MAXIE BAER

NEUSEL'S BIG CLAIM FOR MATCH

Heavy weight champion Max Baer to-day is in a predicament that very few world titlists have found themselves in but 24 hours after winning their crown, that of having two outstanding challengers for the championship.

First and foremost in the eyes of the New York Boxing Commission is tow-headed, free-swinging Walter Neusel of Germany whose rise to fame in the arenas of the United States has been little short of phenomenal.

Then there's former collegian Steve Hannas, under the management of Foxy Charlie Harvey, who has been under blankets for a long while, awaiting a crack at the coveted crown.

NEUSEL'S CLAIMS. There seemed to be little doubt to-day but that Neusel a great crowd pleaser, is the popular choice for the first crack at Maxie's brand-new championship.

The five mentioned, however, with the addition of Steve Hannas, represent—aside from Baer's own outstanding heavyweight fighters—Ray Impollitieri, King Lovinsky and Tommy Loughran and other less notables.

The five mentioned, however, with the addition of Steve Hannas, represent—aside from Baer's own outstanding heavyweight fighters—Ray Impollitieri, King Lovinsky and Tommy Loughran and other less notables.

But what the fans want to know is—will Maxie be a fighting champion along the lines of the world-famed Dempsey who never passed up a legitimate challenger—or will he drift back to being the mainstay of New York's night clubs?

Only time can tell. There's one thing sure. Baer has the goods. His performance last night did more than thousands of inches of the spoken or written word could do for the many art of self defence. Boxing has been losing ground of late. Baer's savage, near-primitive exhibition was more than a mere stimulant. It gave boxing a boost that came nearer to moving the art to a new high level in the world of sport than anything in the past three years.

It Baer keeps up the missionary work—meeting all challengers—and meeting them more than just once a year—there's no telling to what new heights the sport may arise. Heavyweights lead the boxing parade in more ways than one. It's the heavyweight division that packs them in. And it's the heavyweight division performance that are yardsticks for other weight classes.

THE DAVIS CUP

MERLIN BEATS McGRATH BUT JACK CRAWFORD CLINCHES ISSUE

Paris, June 18. Australia to-day qualified to meet Czechoslovakia in the final of the European Zone of the Davis Cup contest by beating France by the odd rubber in five. This is the second year in succession Australia has reached this stage of the contest; last year they were beaten by England.

Jack Crawford, whose defeat by Andre Merlin on Saturday was the only real surprise result of the match, redeemed himself to-day when he clinched the issue for Australia by defeating C. Boussus in a tense five-set struggle.

Afterwards, Merlin, one of the most improved players in Europe this year, went on to beat Vivian McGrath as anticipated in four sets.

Crawford was trailing right through his encounter with Boussus, and it was not until the fourth set that he succeeded in establishing a dominance which finally saw him run away with the final set to love.

MAGNIFICENT BOUSSUS.

Bous-us played a magnificently fighting game. He took the initial set to two, and the third after ten games. During this period Crawford was continuing to commit the errors he made against Merlin, his play lacking imagination.

With defeat staring him in the face, however, the Australian asserted his personality, and assuming the offensive, he swept Boussus off his feet with a series of brilliant rallies. He had Boussus literally standing still in the fifth set.

Although nothing hung on the result of the final tie between Merlin and McGrath, there was never any doubt as to the Frenchman's superiority. He dropped the first set, but thereafter was always in the ascendant, and the next three sets were his for the loss of only four games.

He finished the final set in the same whirlwind fashion as did Crawford earlier on.

The detailed results as cabled by Reuter were:
C. Crawford (Australia) beat C. Boussus (France) 2-6, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0.
A. Merlin (France) beat V. McGrath (Australia) 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 6-0.

Australia and Czechoslovakia now meet to determine the right of playing America in the Inter-Zone final at Wimbledon on July 21, 22, and 24. The European Zone final match has to be completed by July 16.

Orient A.A.A. Has Support Of Japan

TOKYO TO BE ATHLETIC VENUE

Tokyo, June 18. The newly-created Amateur Athletic Association of the Orient to-day is an athletic body enjoying the full support of the Japanese Amateur Athletic Association, which extended approval of its creation at a meeting of the executive committee last night.

The committee, in its session, decided that the first athletic congress to be held under the auspices of the AAAO will be in Tokyo this October.

The AAAO was created in Manila recently by Japan and the Philippines, upon recommendation of the former, after it had introduced a motion dissolving the Far Eastern Athletic Association, premier Oriental sports body for many years, at the FEAA congress.

China, formerly a charter member of the FEAA, is not a member of the newly-created AAAO, to whose creation she entertained strenuous objection.

Japan introduced a resolution creating the AAAO after the Philippines and China had voted against modifying the FEAA's original constitution.

THE LONDON TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS.

AN EARLY RESULT FROM QUEEN'S CLUB.

London, June 18. The London tennis championships started to-day at Queen's Club and will be continued until Saturday, when the finals are scheduled. Among the first results was the defeat of J. T. San by Pennell. Pennell won in two straight sets by the scores of 6-4, 6-4.—Reuter.

AUSSIES WELL HELD

RUN-MAKING HARD AT LORD'S

AMATEURS BAT CONSISTENTLY

London, June 18. The Gentlemen of England gallantly held their own against the Australians at Lord's to-day, when they sent back the remainder of the visiting batsmen for an additional 66 runs to Saturday's close of play score of 164 for 6.

This enabled the Australians to hold a first innings lead of 53. E. R. T. Holmes of Middlesex, and F. R. Brown of Surrey were the most successful bowlers, the former capturing 3 for 31, and his colleague 3 for 45.

The Gentlemen found run-getting a tedious matter when they batted a second time, but they improved their total, finishing with a score of 287.

Scoring was consistent, with three batsmen contributing the major portion of the runs. B. H. Lyon of Somerset hit 67. R. W. V. Robins scored 64, while C. F. Walters helped with 40. B. H. Valentine, said to be in the running for Test match captaincy was out of luck, and lost his wicket after scoring three.

Set with the task of scoring 235 to win, the Australians put together 11 without loss before stumps were drawn for the day.—Reuter.

FILIPINO SWIMMERS FOR TOKYO?

Japanese Invitation To Olympic Stars

Tokyo, June 13. The Japanese Swimming Athletic Association to-night announced that Jikrum Adalludin and Teofilo Ydefonso, famed Filipino breast-stroke swimmers, will be invited to participate in the Japanese national swimming championships to be held in August.

Simultaneously, Kelo University athletic authorities revealed that Harvard University's baseball team will arrive in Japan in August for a series of games with Kelo, and other Japanese teams.

Three of America's outstanding swimmers have been invited—and accepted the invitation—to compete in the Japanese national championships. By inviting renowned competition the Japanese expect to develop their younger stars faster, thus qualifying them for the world Olympic games in Berlin in 1936.

Ydefonso and Jikrum, two of the world's outstanding exponents of the breast stroke, are in Manila. During the recent Tenth Far Eastern Championship Games, Ydefonso defeated Reizo Kolke, Japan's best breast-stroker, in the final of the 200 metre breast-stroke event while his team-mate Jikrum, placed third. Both Ydefonso and Kolke, however, established new Far Eastern records for the event.

CYCLING ALOFT.

Local Enthusiasts In Stiff Sunday Climb.

OVER SHATIN PASS.

Despite the greater heat caused by a late start, the Hongkong Cycling Club's run last week-end was as well attended as usual, and a pleasant, though extremely arduous, spin was immensely enjoyed.

Mr. C. Read (Captain) led the party from the Ferry at 11 a.m. to Shamshulpo, where repair outfits were replenished as a rough trip was anticipated. The route then lay by way of Pak-shui to Tin-lui and Shatin-lui, the cluster of small Chinese villages near Shatin Station. The stone foot-bridge was crossed and it was then suggested that Shatin Pass would be a fine objective. To reach the track leading upwards to the pass it was necessary to cross 400 yards of paddy fields, and by the time the last muddy terrace had been reached all were suffering from the effects of frequent wading in the mire.

A first glimpse of the path indicated that the party were "in for it, good and proper", and only the Captain and the "founder" of the Club (Mr. H.A.G. Kenton) decided to continue. By this time the sun was at its strongest and after a further hour's hard climbing the path—stripped of and plunged into the cool depths of a pool in the valley followed by the track. The many small waterfalls along this route were the foretellers of many pretty scenes, whilst they also provided the riders with their sole refreshment in the form of water.

Shortly after resuming the climb a much rusted iron sign-post with three arms, still in fair condition, made a weak attempt to direct the riders to another trail. The author of the "bending process" failed to realise, however, that maps exist giving these tracks, which probably in past days were much used by bands of smugglers and bandits. The climb was not without an incident of a humorous kind. Our "adventurer" had parked their steeds on a narrow stone bridge whilst they quenched their thirst in the stream. As they returned to the bridge a sprightly gurgling to the machine that they, too, would enjoy a cool bath; the next moment saw them plunge into the depths below.

A Slow Climb. The Pass was reached to the accompaniment of a sharp shower, at 3 p.m. the three-mile climb having taken the two riders nearly three hours to accomplish. The view from its lofty height was unique, almost the whole of the northern shore of the island being in sight, with the Peninsula at the cyclists' feet. A considerable time was spent resting here, whilst the view and refreshments from a neighbouring Chinese house were enjoyed in concert.

The track to Po Kong, nestling at the foot of the Pass, proved hazardous and exciting, being pregnant with dangerous gullies and studded with broken rocks and stones. It has a name, however, this being "Shek-hawati Road" and was laid in 1913 by the 13th Rajputs. The worthy Indians would hardly recognise their handiwork now that the ravages of 24 years have made such inroads into both surface and foundations. It is very doubtful if any motor vehicle could reach the Pass at the present day from the South; from the North it is a definite impossibility for vehicles.

The two cyclists finally reached Shamshulpo at 4.30 p.m.; a total of 25 miles having taken no less than 5½ hours. However, Shatin Pass has at last succumbed to the wheels of cyclists.

Next week's effort will be of a less

FILIPINO FLASH WINS

VERDICT AGAINST CHICAGOAN

SMART BOXING DISPLAY

Sacramento, Cal., June 14. —Cefernio Garcia, Filipino coast welterweight champion, once again demonstrated the power of his punch to-night by stopping Tommy Herman of Chicago in the third of a scheduled ten round bout.

It was Cefernio's fourth victory of the year by either a knockout or technical knockout. Garcia, tipping the scales at 148, was outwitted three pounds by Herman. The disadvantage, in weight, however, apparently affected him for the better rather than for the worse. The Filipino was his usual clever self and rained punches on his opponent from all directions. Herman, in a vain attempt to stem the deluge of defeat, staged occasional flurries but they were of no consequence.

The encounter, after a mix-up in the third when Garcia brought up a terrific punch that stopped Herman dead in his tracks.

ON UPGRADE. Garcia, on the uphill grade after a disastrous knockout defeat sustained at the hands of Young Peter Jackson, coloured welter, on April 10, has beaten in quick succession Baby Sal Sorlo, whom he stopped in four rounds, and Billy Dogge of Honolulu, whom he took in the fifth of a scheduled 10-rounder.

Garcia, always a powerful puncher, has steadily been improving on getting all of his weight behind his blows. He has, in the past year and a half, won fourteen bouts via the short route. In return, over that same period, however, he has been stopped twice. On July 25, 1933, Kid Azteca of Mexico scored a t. k. o. over Garcia in eight rounds. Then, this year, Jackson put the Filipino out in 3 rounds.

CRICKET TOURISTS.

Received By King And Queen At Windsor.

London, June 18. —The Australian cricketers were today received at Windsor Castle by Their Majesties who shook hands with each one and were subsequently photographed with them.

Immediately after the official photographer had finished each of the Australian players left the group and took his own snapshot of his colleagues. The process lasted fifteen minutes, during which time Their Majesties talked with the players.—Router.

energetic nature and Mr. C. Read will again lead the party. He intends to pay a visit to Castle Peak Bay where a halt is to be made for bathing, and probably a hike. The rendezvous will be on the Kowloon side, but the usual site at the Star Ferry has been abandoned in favour of the space at the Yaumati Vehicle Ferry, and interested cyclists are cordially invited to meet there at 9 a.m.

This alteration is partially due to the fact that the Vehicle Ferry caters for the transmission of cyclists at a rate 50% lower than the Star Ferry, and thereby removes a serious objection to mainland runs for the Islander and vice versa.—Contributed.

Yesterday's League Tennis

The U.S.R.C. require only half a point from the match to give them the championship.

EASY POINTS.

The United Services yesterday obtained easy points at the expense of the Ladies Recreation Club, winning by seven sets to two.

Once again Goldman and Mrs. Kayll captured all three sets, and indications are that they will go through the season with this record, unless they have it upset next Monday.

K.C.C. v. C.R.C.

Mrs. W. H. Wilson and E. C. Fincher (K.C.C.) beat Tam Yoc-fong and Mrs. C. Chu 6-2; beat Miss Cheung and W. C. Hung 7-5; beat Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau 6-1.

Mrs. Miller and E. P. Fincher (K.C.C.) lost to Mrs. Chu and Tam 2-6; beat Miss Cheung and Hung 6-1; tied with Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau. Miss Griffiths and A. E. P. Guest (K.C.C.) beat Mrs. Chu and Tam 6-4; beat Miss Cheung and Hung 6-4; lost to Mr. and Mrs. Ho Ka-lau 5-7.

U.S.R.C. v. I.R.C.

Mrs. Kayll and Goldman (U.S.R.C.) beat Dr. and Mrs. Traill 6-1; beat Miss Thomas and Armstrong 6-0; beat Miss Patterson and Dunham 6-1.

Mrs. Lewis Bryan and Cannon (U.S.R.C.) beat Dr. and Mrs. Traill 6-4; lost to Miss Thomas and Armstrong 3-6; beat Miss Patterson and Dunham 6-1.

"B" DIVISION MATCH.

The Indian Recreation Club are hurrying on their programme in the "B" Division of the league, and yesterday met the Chinese Recreation Club in a specially arranged match.

The C.R.C. won comfortably and again go to the head of the table as a result.

CHINESE R.C. v. INDIANS.

Playing at the I. R. C. ground yesterday, the Chinese R. C. beat the Indian R. C. by 7½ sets to 1½.

Y. W. Lee and C. Y. Tso (C. R.C.) drew with A. K. Safford and S. A. Ismail 6-6; beat A. K. Ismail and A. M. Bumjahn 6-1; beat F. D. Pereira and O. Hoosen 6-2.

L. S. Hoa and F. K. Lau (C. R.C.) beat Safford and Ismail 6-3; beat Ismail and Bumjahn 6-4; lost to Pereira and Hoosen 4-6.

P. C. Choy and M. K. Lau (C. R.C.) beat Safford and Ismail 6-2; beat Ismail and Bumjahn 6-1; beat Pereira and Hoosen 6-4.

FORMER HOLDERS KEEP CLEAR IN NEW DRAW

Second Round Of Singles Up To July 12

LAST EIGHT IN RINKS EVENT

The sub-committee in charge of the local lawn bowls open championships met last evening when Mr. B. E. Maughan, President of the Hongkong Lawn Bowls Association made the draw for the second round of the Singles, the third round of the Pairs and the third round of the Rinks championships.

The singles event has provided some interesting ties. Only two former champions remain in the competition. U. M. Omar drawing L. E. Whant and L. A. Gutierrez being matched against J. J. Basto.

For the next rounds the matches are being spread over a longer period than in the preliminary rounds, only four games being arranged for each day in the singles and two or three for the pairs. The Rinks championship matches need not be concluded until July 9 next.

The full draw for the three Championships is appended:

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Transactions done 810,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—The market was erratic and very dull. Traders awaiting the adjournment of Congress. A.T.T. shares were unacceptably weak. Minings, sugars and tobaccos were strong. Curb were narrowly irregular. Bonds were irregularly higher. German bonds declined after an early steadiness. Prices of wheat were upward due to the strength of the corn market on reports of insect damage.

Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz's New York office report:—Stocks. The market continued to act well with a limited volume of business and we look for higher prices. Grains: News continued to be bullish, the market firming on Eastern buying. Cotton: A substantial increase in offerings was well absorbed within a narrow range of prices. There were rains in some sections of the Eastern Belt over the week-end, but the crop forecast is favourable. Spots were dull, except for a fair export demand from Japan, but the basis of the spot market is very firm. Mr. Morgan wires from New Orleans that the hurricane has caused beneficial rains to many districts, without any material damage being reported. Rains in the Western Belt are beneficial and crop progress in this section is satisfactory. Rubber: Both the spot and future markets are dull but firm. Offerings on the primary markets are well above our parity. Silver: The President will sign the Silver Bill at 8.45 to-night, Eastern standard time.

LATHER SHAVE

OR

BRUSHLESS SHAVE

MENNEN GIVES YOU A BETTER SHAVE

MENNEN Brushless Shave is different from others. It is not greasy. It is actually a cream which whisks quickly and makes them easy prey for any razor. Being greaseless, it does not clog your razor guard or basin drain, does not soil your towels.

A clean, effortless shave is yours.

whether you use Mennen Brushless Shave or Mennen Lather Shave (with or without menthol). Both whisks, both enable your razor to skin along without pull or scrape.

Take your choice, but be sure it is Mennen. And, top of the shave with MENNEN TALCUM FOR MEN.

LATHER SHAVE MENNEN BRUSHLESS SHAVE

Radiantly Fresh—Always

In changing seasons—indoors and out-of-doors—the cultured woman retains her charm and animation by the regular use of exquisite "4711." Liberally applied to hands, arms, forehead and nape of neck, "4711"—this fascinating and genuine Eau de Cologne—proves marvellously stimulating and refreshing. A generous dash in bath and wash basin revives and invigorates.

Lovers of "4711" Eau de Cologne always use "4711" Beauty Aids, too. They are easily recognized by the numeral "4711" on the familiar Blue and Gold Label.

NAVAL AIRMAN IN

glers. They committed the piracy, he said, as an act of reprisal against the Chinese Maritime Customs, which has recently stationed extra cruisers along the part of the Shantung coast where they habitually operate.

When the pirates informed Captain Christiansen that they proposed to take four of the foreign passengers and two of the ship's officers as hostages the captain requested that they drag lots for the officers, but the pirates declined to enter into a gamble.

MR. BRAND UNLUCKY.

When, however they selected the first officer as one of their proposed victims, Captain Christiansen protested, declaring that he was necessary to navigate the ship.

The pirates agreed to leave him and took the second officer, Mr. Brand in his stead.

The foreign passengers on the Shantung included five women and three children.

WOMEN TAKE REFUGE.

Mrs. Warren and an infant, Mrs. Learmouth and Mrs. Handley Derry, wife of the British Consul in Tientsin, locked themselves into their cabin when the pirates gained control of the ship and remained there the whole time.

Fortunately the pirates, though they shouted to them to come out, did not make any attempt to break down the doors.

Another British woman, Mrs. Hutecheon, who was travelling with two children, acted with the greatest coolness and bravery, protecting her children from rough handling.

Mr. Handley Derry of the British Consular service, was aboard the Shantung with his wife, but he was not molested.

UNDISTURBED SLEEP.

The ship's purser slept throughout the piracy. He came on deck in the early morning thinking that the ship had arrived at Chefoo, when he encountered a pirate who conducted him to the smoke-room where he joined the officers in temporary confinement.—Reuter.

H.M.S. Witch, which picked up the Shantung on her way to Chefoo during the night, and boarded the ship, sent a wireless message to Shanghai in the early hours of this morning (says Reuter) announcing that Mr. J. P. Lees, the third officer of the Shantung, was severely wounded by the pirates.

His condition, however, appears to be satisfactory. He is in no immediate danger.

Mr. Ross is an Englishman. His parents live in Shanghai.

USUAL MANNER.

The Shantung officers state that the pirates worked in their usual manner, boarding the vessel as passengers at Tungku and attacking all the important points at a given signal.

Within a few minutes of the attack they had secured complete control of the bridge, the wireless operator's cabin and the engine-room.

Half the pirates then commenced on the process of ransacking the ship from stem to stern, concentrating chiefly upon easily removable loot such as money and valuables.

CREW TERRORISED.

The other section of the gang kept the officers covered with revolvers and terrorised the passengers and the crew.

The pirates worked fast and it was evident from their tactics that the affair was well-planned, with their rendezvous for departing from the ship well organised beforehand.

JUNKS NOTED.

Hardly had they completed the collection of the loot and arrived at the point to which they had ordered the master to direct the ship that five junks appeared alongside and the transfer of the haul was undertaken.

When the bigger articles stolen had been stowed away, the pirates picked out twenty of the Chinese passengers as victims to accompany them and ordered them into the junks.

FATE DECIDED.

Immediately afterwards, following some palaver between the leaders of the gang, the six foreigners, including Lieutenants Field and Luce, Mr. Nicholls, Shanghai manager of Manufacturers Life Insurance Company, the Second Officer, Mr. Brand the Third Engineer, Mr. Watson, and a Japanese passenger, were also ordered into the junks on pain of instant death.

VALUABLE CLUE.

It is stated that those on board were able to note the registration numbers of the junks.

The Shantung's master is Captain C. A. Christiansen, who has been in the employ of Messrs.

SIX-FOOT-FIVE VICAR'S
HOTEL PROBLEMNo Bed Long Enough
For Him

Canon G. F. Coleridge, the Vicar of Crowthorne, Berkshire, whose height is six feet five inches, and who is a delegate at the annual conference of the bellingers of Great Britain at Warwick, has had difficulty in finding a suitable bed in the town.

All the delegates were to be accommodated at a certain hotel, but it was then discovered that the hotel did not possess a bed sufficiently long for the Canon, who weighs 20 stone.

After considerable inquiry another hotel was found where there was a bed in which the Canon could sleep with comfort.

Canon Coleridge stated to a Press representative that he must have a long bed not only because of his six feet five inches, but because of an injury to one of his knees, which necessitates him keeping his legs at full stretch.

CHILLED MEAT

AUSTRALIA COMPETES WITH ARGENTINA

Australia is determined to build up the strongest competition in chilled meat against the Argentina, and this year is expected to see a big rise in beef exports.

At least 50,000 head of cattle more than last year are to be killed, and chilled exports will have their first try-out on a large scale. Record shipments of mutton and lamb have been made recently at Australian ports.

RARE METAL
FOUNDBETTER THAN ALUMINIUM

Mining circles in Australia are much interested in the discovery in Tasmania of a rare metal called beryllium oxide or glucina for which there is a great demand in Europe. Similar to aluminium, it is worth 55 a ton as against the 11 commanded by the former ore. Only two other places in the world are reported to possess it, says Austral News.

PROPERTY SOLD.

HOLLYWOOD ROAD HOUSE
FETCHES $17,500

Situated in one of the most crowded residential areas of the Colony, property registered in the Land Office as the remaining portion of Section "C" of Inland Lot No. 697, together with the dwelling house, and shop thereon known as No. 255 Hollywood Road was sold by public auction by Messrs. Hughes and Hough yesterday afternoon.

Bidding commenced at $15,500 and the property was finally knocked down to Mr. Lo Yiu-ping, for $17,500.

DR. KOO RETURNING.

LEAVING FOR CHINA IN SIX MONTHS

Amsterdam, June 18. Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese chief representative at Geneva, whose distinguished career has been marked latterly by his outstanding ability during the critical Sino-Japanese controversy, is returning to China in six months. He will be succeeded at Geneva by Mr. Wan Sze-king, present Minister at The Hague, and one of China's foremost diplomats.—Reuter.

FIERCE HEATH FIRE.

MENACING KING'S ESTATE
IN NORFOLK

London, June 18. A fierce heath fire is raging in Norfolk, on the outskirts of the King's estate at Sandringham.—Reuter.

On a charge of loitering in Bonham Road near Peak Road at 1.15 a.m. on Sunday, Ching Lok, 29, unemployed, was fined $100 or two months' hard labour by Mr. Hamilton in the Central Magistrate's court this morning. Inspector Heurthum stated that defendant was seen putting his hand to a grille of one of the houses.

Butterfield and Swire on the China Coast for thirty years. This was the second trip of the Shantung from Tungku to Chefoo. She was built in Hongkong at the Taikeo and was only put into commission a few weeks ago, her maiden voyage having been embarked upon last month.—Reuter.

MISREPRESENTATION.

CHINA LIGHT AND POWER
CO.'S WARNING

It has come to the notice of the China Light and Power Company (1918) Limited that prior to and after their Inspecting Engineers' visits to consumers' premises, certain individuals have called on consumers and represented themselves to be connected with the company and authorised by it to enter consumers' premises to test installations or to carry out repairs.

In a special notice to consumers, the Company again draws the attention of all consumers, and the public generally, to the fact that all authorised Asiatic employees of the Company carry with them Identification Cards bearing the photograph, name and number of the bearer and the embossed stamp of the Company, which they are instructed to show to any consumer on demand, and consumers are, in their own interests, requested to demand to see these Identification Cards and to refuse admission to any workman who cannot show such a card.

The Company also wishes consumers to understand clearly that they do not undertake any jobbing, contracting or repair work on Consumers' installations, that the Company's workmen are forbidden to undertake such work privately, that the Company have no "official contractor", that a Consumer is at liberty to engage any competent individual or firm to carry out work on his installation and that the Company does not in any way guarantee or accept any responsibility for any work done by any individual or firm of contractors even although the installation may be passed by the Company's Engineers for connection to the Supply.

ENGLAND IS DRY.

LACK OF RAIN STILL SERIOUSLY FELT

London, June 18. Britain still lies in the area of a big anti-cyclone and there is every prospect of warm, sunny weather continuing. During the past month measurable rain has fallen in London on only two occasions, the amount being 0.02 inches.

At the week-end the temperature reached 87 degrees in some places, the highest since last August.

Although in the Metropolitan area no immediate restrictions on the use of water are to be enforced, people are asked to exercise reasonable economy, not to wash motorcars excessively, not to be extravagant with garden hoses and to put less water in their baths.

In several other parts of the country, however, and notably in many rural areas the drain on water resources causes anxiety and in some places hardship. Sunny weather, on the other hand, has favoured innumerable sporting and social functions held at this time of year and the present conditions promise to continue for Ascel, where the famous race meeting opens to-morrow.

During its four days' "Royal Ascel" will again be favoured by the presence of the King and Queen, who in accordance with custom, will drive to the meeting in semi-state each day.—British Wireless.

LABOUR CONFERENCE.

UNITED STATES INVITED TO JOIN ORGANISATION

Geneva, June 18. The International Labour Conference, in session here, to-day passed a resolution unanimously inviting the United States to affiliate. It is supposed that the invitation will go to the American Federation of Labour, as the most representative workers' body in America.—United Press.

DARING PIRACY

TWO BRITISH NAVAL OFFICERS CAPTURED

Chefoo, June 18. The new steamer Shantung, on her second voyage from Tangku to Chefoo, was captured by pirates this morning somewhere in the vicinity of the mouth of the Yellow River.

She is now proceeding to Chefoo, with a dramatic and tragic tale of the piracy to be told on her arrival. It is learned that one European aboard was wounded in the fight with the pirates and that six others were taken ashore, amongst whom was Mr. Nicholl, the Shanghai manager of the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Company.

British Officers.

There are two British naval officers among the captives, it is learned. They are Lieutenants Field and Luce.

A Japanese passenger named Yamamoto, Second Officer Brand and Third Engineer Watson are also in the hands of the raiders.

A man named Ross is the only one seriously injured.

Approximately 20 Chinese are also held captive.

The remainder of the passengers, the ship reports, are unhurt.

The Shantung is due at Chefoo early to-morrow morning.

Warships on Way.

Later. The American destroyer Pope and the U.S. Navy tender Bittern left Chefoo at 9 p.m. for the scene of the piracy.

The British destroyers Witch and Veteran are also proceeding to the scene from Wei-hai-wei.—Reuter.

The two captured naval officers are thought to be Lieut. J. D. Luce, of H.M.S. Osiris, and Lieut. P. L. Field, of H.M.S. Oswald, both submarines on the China Station.

The Shantung was built at the Taikeo Dockyard and was commissioned about three weeks ago. She was specially constructed for working the northern China ports for the China Navigation Company and left on her maiden voyage last month.

THE GASWORKS
DISASTEREXPERT ATTRIBUTES
IT TO CORROSION

Continuing the dramatic evidence he had commenced at a previous hearing, Mr. W. A. Butterfield, of the Asiatic Petroleum Co. (S.S.C.), Ltd., who was called in by the Government as an expert witness, yesterday told the Coroner's Court inquiring into the circumstances of the West Point gasometer explosion, that corrosion had become so bad that the plates of the container, from their original thickness of 1/10th of an inch, were reduced to 1/40th. He was of the considered opinion that they should have been renewed some while ago.

With regard to the origin of the disaster, witness believed that gas, which had found its way into the watchmen's quarters, ignited there the resulting throw-back causing the major tank explosion.

GUERRA DEATH
INQUIRYHUSBAND GIVES TESTIMONY

Mr. R. Guilherme Alves-Guarra, Consul General for Portugal, Hongkong, gave evidence yesterday at the inquiry into the death of his wife. He stated the deceased was his wife. He married her in September, 1932. They went to Singapore and stayed there for a year and then went to Canton. While in Singapore she had fits of depression and while he lived in Canton, she spent most of the time in Hongkong, living at the Peninsula Hotel. She was very worried about her health.

Wife Was Upset.

The Consul-General continued that he intended to take room 542 but on May 29, his wife stated she thought it would be better not to do so. He left the key of the communicating door with the reception office clerk. He kept the key until then, because he had removed a few things into room 542. He left for work at 9 a.m. and at 1.20 p.m. she came to his office in Hongkong and they went to the Hongkong Hotel grill room for lunch, this being their usual routine. They parted at the Stock Exchange Building and she said that she was going to her tailor and then to the cinema. She appeared upset, but, as she had often appeared this way, he did not pay any attention. When he arrived at the Hongkong Hotel at 4 p.m., he went to the reception office. She did not turn up at 4.30 p.m. and, half-an-hour later, he telephoned to the Peninsula Hotel, but received no reply from his room.

Supposing that she had gone to Repulse Bay with Mr. Ohl's child, he telephoned Mr. Ohl's house, but the boy replied that Mrs. Guerra was not there. He then met Mr. Druth and asked him to have a drink. He told him that he was a little upset about his wife. He left the hotel at 5.30 p.m. and took a taxi to Mr. Ohl's house. On arrival there, both he and Mr. Ohl considered it strange, and they motored to the Ferry and then went to the Peninsula Hotel.

Dreadful Discovery.

Mr. Guerra continued: "I went up to the room with Mr. Ohl. I knocked at the door. I smelt some medicine in the passage. I called for the boy who said the room was locked. I sent for the key to 542. The boy came with the key and then we had to wait for the key for the communicating door. The first person to enter was Mr. Ohl. I followed and then, I think, the boy went in.

"I saw my wife sitting in the chair, her head on the right side, with a revolver held loosely in her right hand."

The Coroner handed the gun to Mr. Guerra and asked him if he could illustrate exactly how the gun was found. Mr. Guerra said when the discovery was made he was very upset and he was afraid he could not demonstrate properly how the gun was held. She was not grasping it.

She was fully dressed, wearing the same dress as she had at lunch time. He immediately called for a doctor and Mr. Ohl telephoned for the ambulance. Witness went with her to the hospital. He did not move the body before the arrival of the doctor or the ambulance, but merely felt the foot to see if the body was still warm. The ambulance man removed the pistol.

Pistol Ownership.

"The pistol belonged to Mr. Ohl," he said.

SOLICITOR RETIRES.

MR. HORACE LO TO GIVE UP PRACTICE

After practising as a solicitor in Hongkong for nearly eight years, Mr. Horace Lo, brother of Messrs. M. K. and M. W. Lo, and a partner of the well-known legal firm of Messrs. Lo and Lo, has decided to give up law.

He will be leaving Messrs. Lo and Lo at the end of the month to throw in his lot with the Mercantile Bank of India, by whom he has been appointed Chinese Manager.

Mr. Lo has had a wide practice since his admission to the local Bar in October, 1926, after passing his final examination. For the last few years, Mr. Lo has earned a reputation as a tennis player, having appeared regularly for the Chinese Recreation Club, and as a physical culturist.

He was educated at Queen's College, and whilst there he obtained the "Junior Morrison," "Ho Fook," and the "Senior Morrison" scholarships, the last named being, of course, the most coveted prize. He left Queen's College in 1918, when he matriculated, and went to the Hongkong University, where he studied in the Arts Faculty for two years.

He was articled to his brother, Mr. M. K. Lo, in November, 1921. He went to England in January, 1924, and whilst there he attended the office of Messrs. Lo and Lo's London agents, Messrs. Darley, Cumberland and Co., and went through a course of legal studies for two years, with the well-known firm of law co-operators, Messrs. Gibson and Weldon.

The Coroner: How did your wife come to have it?

Mr. Guerra: I don't know. I borrowed it from Mr. Ohl in December last year when I went to Canton. I kept it in a bag, locked.

Replying further, Mr. Guerra stated his wife had no reason to be worried.

Inspector Lane: The bag was unlocked when the Police found it. The Coroner: You kept the bag locked?

Mr. Guerra: Yes, I also had books in the bag.

Mr. Guerra added that he reached the Peninsula Hotel at about 6 p.m. He did not know why his wife went back to the hotel. She went to Mr. Ohl's office, where she spoke with friends, and then returned to the hotel, after which she went to fill in with witness.

Mr. Guerra stated that they had filled in at the Hongkong Hotel almost every day, even on Sundays. His wife did not have many friends in Hongkong. Her two friends, Mrs. Ohl and Mrs. Druth, were away in Japan. She paid occasional visits to Portuguese families.

Question of Divorce.

"My relations with my wife were good, despite her fits of depression," Mr. Guerra added. "When she had her fits she was very irritating, but on all those occasions I tried to calm her. The Coroner: Was there any question of divorce?"

Mr. Guerra: One day she spoke about divorce but I was sure that she was not speaking seriously about it.

The Coroner: Is there any reason for you to believe that she had committed suicide?

Mr. Guerra: She sometimes said she was fed up with life. I did not really believe that she might commit suicide.

At this stage the inquiry was adjourned to this afternoon at 2.30.

MARRIED FLIRTS

I'll pile these up and you can leave them for Elma."

She slipped out of his grasp.

She whirled, facing him. "Take your hands off me!"

Was it really she who said those ugly words? They echoed in the quiet room.

"What's the matter, darling?"

She flung herself back to the sink, running hot water into the enamel pan, winking back the fierce hot tears.

"You're asking me that!"

Tom's tone was patient, inquiring. "Honestly, if I knew what this was all about I didn't know you were going to be so burned up about a guest for dinner. Besides, I thought you liked . . .

"That's got nothing to do with it," she said thickly and painfully.

"Hunt's grand, I'm fond of him.

It's you."

"What have I done now?"

Oh, this can't be us . . . it can't be, ran Gypsy's wild thoughts.

Quarrelling . . . shouting at each other . . . without dignity or love or tenderness.

"I saw you today." She gave him a level glance. She continued to wash cups, meticulously and daintily, without being conscious of what she was doing.

"Saw me? Where?" He redened slightly.

"With Vera Gray."

"Ah, that! Honestly, sweetheart, I would have told you about it before if we'd been alone."

But she would not let him go on.

"Never mind lying," she said.

"It doesn't matter. Only—I know where I stand now. I'm parked with the baby and the house and everything. You can go and do as you please, lunch and dine and dance with other people and call it business. Deceive me. Lie to me. You know I'm safe at home."

Tom almost shouted. "I had to have a conference with her. I couldn't get out of it. She was dashing out to Queens to see this chap. The Nussik people."

"It looked like business," Gypsy supplied bitterly. "You had her arm—she acted as if she owned

you. You both walked right past me."

"Where? How? When?"

But she was silent. What use to go over the old ground? He had broken his word. That was all she needed to know.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CLUB.

FORMED AT INAUGURAL

MEETING OF ENTHUSIASTS

Approximately 40 photographic enthusiasts gathered together at the Lane, Crawford's Restaurant yesterday afternoon to discuss the possibilities of forming a photographic club in Hongkong. Mr.

J. C. Grenham presided at the meeting.

It was generally agreed to form a club, to be known as the

"Hongkong International Photographic Society." The first aim would be to establish a club-house and the formation of a dark-room, the idea being to start the society in a small way and to work upwards.

The following committee was elected:

President.—Mr. J. C. Grenham.

Hon. Treasurer.—Mr. S. B. Tam.

Committee.—Dr. F. Banje,

Messrs. Peter Dring, R. P. Dunlop, C. L. Chau, A. Betts, and K.

June.

After some discussion, it was agreed that the subscription should be fixed at $2 per month, with an entrance fee of $5.

WHOLE TEAM TO

LEADING PLAYERS UNFIT

London, June 18.
England's Test selectors are experiencing acute difficulties in nominating a satisfactory team for the Second Test which opens at Lord's on Friday.

It is confirmed that Larwood, the famous fast bowler of Nottinghamshire, has declined to play, and other players on which the Committee desired to call are not available for other reasons.

The English team for the Second Test was expected to be announced to-night, but the Selectors have not yet completed their task.

Sir Stanley Jackson, the chairman, stated that three men who the Committee hoped to play, informed the Committee to-night that they are not fit.

BALANCE UPSET.
Therefore, the Committee will have to reconsider the composition of the team to-morrow as the balance of the side has been entirely upset by these mishaps.

Sir Stanley hinted that efforts had been made to persuade Lar-wood to change his mind when he said that Larwood still adhered to his decision not to play in any Test Match.—Reuter.

Peking, June 18.
After a service at the Union
Church this afternoon the remains of the late Dr. Ingram were conveyed to Tungchow for burial at the Permanent Cemetery, where are the graves of the foreigners who perished during the Boxer Rebellion.

Up to present, no clue has been secured to aid in tracing the bandits responsible for the murder of Dr. Ingram.

General Yu Hsueh-chung, Gover-ment, has despatched additional troops to assist in the search.

According to a Government spokesman, the Chinese authorities are likely to take a census of the people in the districts surrounding Shih Ching-shan, where the crime was committed.

The Government is holding the magistrate of Yuen Ping District responsible. He may be punished if no trace of the bandits is found in the near future.—Central News.

U.S. AIR SENSATION

GENERAL FOULOIS ATTACKED

ACCUSED OF LYING

Washington, June 18.
Further serious charges were laid against Major-General Benjamin Foulois,
Chief of the Army Air Corps, during a discussion in the House of Representatives to-day.

Speaking on the report of the Committee which asked for the removal of Major-General Foulois from his post for "gross misconduct and inefficiency," Mr. W.
N. Rogers, chairman of the House
Military Affairs Committee, declared that Major-General Foulois lied when he testified before the Committee that the Army pilots who recently had to fly mail planes had undergone from thirty to sixty hours of night-flying.

Mr. Rogers quoted figures which, he said, showed that the pilots, involved in the air mail crashes had a much lower average of night-flying experience. Some of them had only 8.2 hours of night-flying.—
